WASHINGTON—(INS)—Treasury Sec. Snyder has announced that President Truman's controversial White House balcony is now being shown on the backs of twenty-dollar bills.

The new rear-view picture of the White House displaces one made in 1929. Architectural changes shown include four chimneys instead of two and the awning-shaded back porch balcony which Mr. Truman ordered.

Six Hurt in Auto Crash in Uptown Atlanta

Six persons were injured late yesterday in a collision of two automobiles at Peachtree and Baker Streets. Patrolmen G. S. Robertson and F. A. Turner said.

An auto driven west on Baker by Elmer Landers, of 47 Delta Pl., S. E., collided with a car operated south on Peachtree by Richard J. Perkins, of Thomaston. Miss Laura Bell Smith, 34, of Thomaston, occupant of the Perkins machine, was slightly hurt.

Occupants of the car driven by Landers treated at Grady Hospital for cuts and bruises included Bobby, Lee Reese, 9; Mrs. Della Louise Landers, of 47 Delta Pl.; Hazel Mae Reese, 15, and Betty Jean Reese, 13, of Marietta.

Georgian's Trial Ends as Kin Confesses Slaying

MORGANTOWN, W. Va.—(P)—The murder trial of a 28-year-old Georgian came to an abrupt end when his father-in-law testified that he himself—and not the man on trial—had done the killing.

Circuit Judge Charles G. Baker immediately ordered a directed verdict of acquittal for John Craft, of Augusta, Ga.

The Judge ordered Craft's father-in-law, David Houston, 47, of Sabraton, W. Va., held on a bench warrant charging murder.

Shortly after Houston took the stand he said he had prepared a statement, which he authorized Defense Atty. Minter L. Wilson to read.

The statement told of having a fight with Steve Lipovich, 20-year-old Sabraton coal miner Sept. 16, after "Steve kissed my wife" in a tavern.

Houston Heart Victim's Hogs Mutilate Body

MACON—(P)—Hogs mutilated the body of a heart attack victim before his death was discovered by his son on his Houston County farm near Warner Robins.

The man, Henry Jackson Self, prominent Houston farmer, was attacked by his own hogs at exposed parts of his body yesterday. He died about 2 p. m., according to Houston County Sheriff C. C. Chapman, and was discovered by his son, Harris, about 5:30 p. m.

Navy, Air, Water Craft Comb Area

PEARL HARBOR, T. H.—(UP)—An undisclosed number of Navy air and surface search craft swept the Pacific nine miles from the great U. S. Naval Base of Pearl Harbor early today in an attempt to locate a mysterious submarine.

Pacific Fleet Submarine Force Headquarters said: "It is highly unlikely it would be one of our submarines. If it is we don't know anything about it."

The Navy said the submarine rescue vessel U. S. S. Bluebird on a routine patrol "reported evidence of a possible submarine contact nine miles south of Pearl Harbor."

"Other units have been directed to search the area," Pacific Fleet Headquarters' public information office said. "No verification of the presence of a submarine has been obtained."

The public information office telephoned the announcement to the press shortly after 4 p. m. HST (9 p. m. EST).

This was approximately one hour after the Bluebird had made its original contact, the Navy said.

The memo was issued, the Navy explained, "because the Navy thought it was news and also to forestall possible rumors of such an operation, involving several hundred men."

An undisclosed number of air, surface and search craft swept the area, taking up the standard concentric pattern used in wartime around the original point of contact.

"If it's a sub it will have to surface sooner or later," the Navy said.

However, as night fell no further trace of a submarine was reported.

A Naval spokesman in Washington declined to comment on the Pearl Harbor report.

The Bluebird, which reported the first contact, carries extensive gear for locating and rescuing submarines.

One reason for the promptness of the report being made public, the Navy said, was that "we thought it better to put out as much straight dope as we know, rather than having rumors of 10 subs firing torpedoes into the harbor entrance."

Officers Hit In Texas, Oklahoma

Mrs. Margaret H. O'Gee, well-known Atlanta lottery operator, today said she would fight extradition to Texas, where she faced a charge of kidnaping her eight-year-old son.

Mrs. O'Gee was arrested yesterday in Walters, Okla., after she had fled from Wichita Falls, Texas, with young Jackie O'Gee whom she allegedly kidnaped from an elementary school earlier in the day.

Two Atlanta taxicab drivers, listed as Johnny E. Carver and Ernest Lee Evans, were being held in Wichita Falls on charges of kidnaping in connection with the case.

Deputy Constable Frank Watkins, one of two Wichita Falls officers who went to Walters in an attempt to return Mrs. O'Gee and the boy, said she refused to waive extradition.

He said he was told he would have to have a court order to bring the boy back. He said Mrs. O'Gee was in jail, and the boy was staying at the home of Deputy Sheriff Charlie High, of Walters.

Kidnaping charges against the trio were filed by District Atty. Elmer Perkins, of Wichita Falls.

Dr. O'Gee told Texas police his divorced wife "forced her way into an elementary school in Wichita Falls where young Jackie and his 11-year-old brother, Paul, were students. Over the protests of teachers and other school authorities, she took the children and left the school."

Parish said G. H. Kirby, Principal of the school, told him Paul broke away from his mother, and she shoved Jackie into the car and drove away.

He said Kirby told him Carver was in the car, but Evans was standing outside; was left when the car drove off, and went from the school down to the police station voluntarily.

The District Attorney said several hours later Carver returned in the car; told police he had taken Mrs. O'Gee and Jackie to Walters, and had returned to pick up Evans.

Kirby said Mrs. O'Gee came to the school during the morning, lunched with the two boys, and walked out after telling him she planned to take them with her. Parish said Kirby told him he

DOUBLE SHOOTING—Two brothers were critically injured yesterday in Brookhaven from shotgun blasts which DeKalb County police said were fired by their brother-in-law, George L. Morris, Jr., 32, of Brookhaven. Roy Casey, left, of Atlanta, was admitted to Grady Hospital in extremely critical condition. He is shown in the Grady emergency clinic being treated by Dr. Joseph Girard. Eugene Casey, a Brookhaven brick mason, is shown with Miss Frances Hickey, a nurse in the Grady emergency clinic. DeKalb police said the shooting occurred at the Morris home in Brookhaven in a "family squabble." Morris is being held by police.

Shotgun Blasts Hurt Two Critically; Police Blame 'Family Feud' in Arrest

By KEELER MCCARTNEY

Two men were critically injured in Brookhaven yesterday from shotgun blasts inflicted as an aftermath of what DeKalb County police described as a "family squabble."

Roy Casey, 37, of a Baker Street, N. E., address an employee of the Yellow Cab Company, was admitted to Grady Hospital in critical condition from a shotgun blast in the left leg and side. His brother, Eugene Casey, 34, of 211 Osborn Rd., Brookhaven, a brick mason, was admitted to Lawson Veterans Administration Hospital with a similar injury.

DeKalb police were holding George L. Morris, Jr., 32, of 1654 Candler Road, Brookhaven, a brother-in-law of the Caseys, in connection with the shooting.

At present Morris is being detained on charges of assault with intent to murder, pending further investigation and the condition of the two wounded men, Hoyt Sutton, Acting Chief of the DeKalb police, said. He added, police are attempting to contact several other witnesses to the shooting which occurred at Morris' home.

Morris said the trouble between his brothers-in-law and himself began several months ago when he and his wife separated, according to DeKalb Patrolmen W. A. Jones and C. C. Booth, first officers to reach the scene.

Yesterday afternoon, Morris related, he and two employees—Henry Kelly, of 300 Washington St., and Jimmy Gennett, of an Atlanta hotel—were riding along Candler Road in a truck when they noticed Roy and Eugene Casey and a third brother, Bud, 29, who resides on Thirteenth Street, following them in a panel truck.

"They tried to run us off the road four or five times and one of them yelled that he was going to kill me," Morris declared. Sutton said Kelly and Gennett verified the statement.

"When I got home and ran up in the yard, I jumped out of my truck and went in the house," Morris continued. "They stopped their truck and ran up on the porch and began trying to open the door."

"My mother is 74 years old and when she went to the door and tried to stop them, they shoved her back and ran up on the porch."

Penal Reform Request Slated for Legislature

To further Georgia's penal reform program, the Board of Corrections will ask Gov.-Elect Herman Talmadge and the 1949 Legislature to:

1. Require state agencies to buy prison-manufactured products so as to develop Talmadge State Prison's vocational program.

2. Construct three new prisons so as to make possible the segregation of women, juveniles, and incorrigibles.

The annual report of the Board of Corrections, which soon will be submitted to Talmadge and the Legislature, will ask for an appropriation of $600,000 to construct a prison for women, a prison for juveniles, and a prison for incorrigibles in locations removed from the Georgia State Prison near Reidsville.

The report also will ask for a special appropriation of at least $125,000 to establish an industrial program at Talmadge.

Pointing out that the State is not utilizing the full productive capacity of the State Prison, Director Charlie Williams says:

"If the State would give the prison its printing and stationery business, which the prison is well equipped to handle, it would not only effect substantial savings, but would afford occupational and vocational training opportunities to many of the inmates."

"The manufacturing of concrete culvert piping for use in road construction, the manufacturing of mops, brooms, ax and shovel handles, and simple articles of clothing and shoes for the thousands of inmates in State institutions are among other occupational training industries that could be carried on at the State Prison with a modest outlay for equipment."

"Under the law, the State is the only consumer that prison can supply. It is capable of producing many things used by the State."

'Beau Brummell' Rob Ring Smashed

With the arrest of three youths in Nashville, Tenn., Atlanta detectives today said they had smashed a 10-man "Beau Brummell" burglary gang which preyed almost at will on business establishments here for the last two months.

The three gaudily clad youths taken into custody at Nashville were listed as James Dingler, 19, of Red Oak; Dan Powell, 49, Kendrick St., and Jack Hardy, of 674 West Peachtree St.

Sgt. W. D. Anderson and Det. J. W. Elliott said they had obtained information the trio left Atlanta after the arrests of their seven confederates in a stolen automobile. They allegedly burglarized places through Mississippi and Tennessee. The detectives said the car in which the youths left Atlanta was recovered several days ago in Memphis, Tenn.

Six other members of the gang already have been bound over to the Fulton County Grand Jury. They are Curtis Henderson, 21, of 774 Piedmont Ave., N. E.; $8,000 bond; Harold Seegars, 16, of Winder; Kenneth McClure, 148 Jackson St.; George Hembree, 20, of 309 Stovall St.; James Motes, 22, of 961 Lee St., S. W., and Albert Whitlock, 22, of 785 Edgewood Ave., N. E.

The tenth gang member, Charles Bell, 27, of Decatur, was shot when he attempted to elude Patrolmen T. R. Reid and R. V. Paschal in an allegedly stolen auto on Memorial Drive at Cherokee Avenue and has not been released from the hospital.

Anderson and Elliott, who with Dets. J. J. Morris, W. E. Harwell, M. V. Moss and I. M. Helton worked the burglary investigations, said the 10 had paraded as the "Beau Brummells" of Luckie Street for many weeks before running afoul of officers. They said the men wore flashy "tea hound" coats and often spent as much as $75 to $100 each on parties for friends.

Most of the gaudy clothes came from burglaries in clothing stores, detectives related. They explained ring members selected some of the clothes for their personal use and sold others for whatever they could get. Detectives said the 10 worked in teams of from two to three and split the loot.

Victims of the raids included a number of the Georgia Milk Producers stores as well as individual grocery, hardware and clothing stores, the detectives charged. They said they had recovered a quantity of loot with the arrest of the ring. The three arrested yesterday in Nashville fled Atlanta after the first seven were picked up.

PROTEST MEETING PLANNED

Dog Lovers Decry Conditions at Pounds

By ALBERT RILEY

What Atlanta is doing to "man's best friend" shouldn't happen to a dog.

True, if he's a stray dog, chances are nobody wants him. He is a helpless, friendless creature, and may even be a menace to health.

But Atlanta is guilty not only of butting my head against a stone wall and getting no co-operation from City or County officials.

Other women, members of the Georgia and Atlanta Humane Societies, echoed her sentiments.

"The pounds are perfectly horrible," declared Mrs. Katherine Weathersby, of College Park, "and the helpless dogs there suffer terribly. Even though many of them are going to be put to death, we should give them more humane treatment."

Mrs. Stacy Hill, of 2820 Vernon Rd., agreed. So did Mrs. Gordon Plant, 982 Highland View, N. E., and Mrs. Paul Dixon, 628 Park Dr., N. E.

M. E. Lind, Manager of the Atlanta Humane Society's shelter, termed the pounds a "disgrace" to Atlanta.

Complaints, however, were directed to the city.

Fair and Colder Forecast Today

Topcoats, earmuffs and mittens will be in order for all Georgians this morning, the weatherman said, as he predicted "fair and colder" weather for the State.

In Atlanta, the thermometer will plunge to 36 degrees this morning. It will rise to 58 during the day, but will drop again to 36 degrees tonight.

Sales Tax Advocated By Wingate

Passage of a consumers' sales tax which would exempt nothing and the abolishment of the ad valorem tax were advocated yesterday by H. L. Wingate, Georgia Farm Bureau President, in his annual report to the convention at Macon.

The Bureau members shortly thereafter adopted a resolution urging the State Legislature to "develop and adopt a sound, fair tax program."

Wingate told his audience the gasoline tax should be used exclusively on roads, and if the sales tax were passed, then the gasoline tax could be used for building roads.

Advocating high wages and high prices for the farmers' benefit, Wingate warned that the Aiken bill, if passed, would reduce national incomes. Under its provisions, the United States would not be able to finance its debt and also keep incomes high, the Farm President declared.

While believing in high wages and high prices for the farmer, Wingate warned that industry must be permitted a fair return on the money it invests or there would be no high prices for the farmer and no high wages for labor.

The Farm Bureau President urged establishment of the minimum foundation for education. "I had no patience with people who voice approval of better education and better wages for teachers, but do nothing to raise the money necessary to insure the program will work."

"I'm tired of hearing people say we can't finance an education program for our children because we haven't the money. If we are for

Reds Warn 'Stray' Craft; Peace Talk Rumor Spiked

By The Associated Press
American military officials in Berlin disclosed last night that Russia had threatened to force down all aircraft wandering off the air corridors in the supply route to Berlin.

The disclosure came in the midst of rumors that President Truman and Prime Minister Stalin might get together soon for peace talks. The White House, however, said there were no plans for a Truman-Stalin meeting and the President had no intention of going to Moscow.

The Soviet threat is the most drastic move yet made by the Russians to hinder the British-American airlift. Official sources in the Western sectors said the move raised the possibility of numerous and serious incidents. Brig. Gen. C. K. Galley, Chief of Staff to the American Military Governor, said "full and complete responsibility will rest on the shoulders of the Soviet authorities" for any injuries to pilots or damage to planes.

The rumors of East-West peace talks sprang largely from the fact result of the continued Communist sweep and a new outbreak of hunger riots. A responsible official said the Government would declare martial law in Nanking and Shanghai.

EDUCATION WEEK—One-third of Georgia's teachers quit their jobs, annually to go to neighboring States which offer more attractive teaching salaries. This is the disheartening fact pointed out on the map above by Jean Wilson, a student at Decatur Girls High. The map is the central feature of a window display prepared by Decatur Girls High students in connection with the current observance of American Education Week.

that Soviet newspapers displayed prominently a Tass dispatch quoting the Washington Times-Herald as saying President Truman was willing to go to Moscow to talk with Stalin.

It then became known that the Vatican Newspaper L'Osservatore Romano had expressed hope in an editorial the American election might have opened the way for talks between Mr. Truman and the Soviet Prime Minister.

Later Tris Coffin, Times-Herald columnist who originally wrote the article quoted by Tass, sent a cable to Stalin suggesting arrangements be made for talks with President Truman.

In Paris, U. S. Secretary of State Marshall at the UN would not comment.

The Assembly's Political Committee finally approved a four-power resolution condemning Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia for aiding Greek guerrillas.

The four-power resolution also extended the life of the UN Special Committee on the Balkans (UNSCOB) and called on Greece's northern neighbors to co-operate with it.

As a final measure, the Committee approved a proposal calling for an immediate peace conference of the four warring Balkan countries.

The Security Council began work on a Palestine Armistice plan submitted by Acting Mediator Ralph Bunche, but action was postponed after Russia proposed amendments. In the afternoon a seven-member Committee of the Council heard a new Bunche suggestion for making Palestine's Southern Negev Desert a virtual no-man's-land. Action was postponed until Friday.

Major developments elsewhere:

In Frankfurt, Germany, British and American Military Governors announced reorganization plans under which Western Germany's vast coal, iron and steel industries would be returned to German ownership soon. France protested.

Nanking reports indicated the situation in China continued to deteriorate. Americans were reported fleeing the country as a result of the Japanese army and navy freely practiced torture, murder, rape and other cruelties of the most inhuman and barbarous character.

The judgment named 19 of the 25 war crimes defendants as being responsible for various violations. Hideki Tojo was one of the 19—first as War Minister during the China war and then as Premier at the time of Pearl Harbor.

Atrocities against prisoners of war, civilian internees and people of occupied countries, the tribunal said, followed so general a pattern everywhere that only one conclusion is possible:

"The atrocities were either secretly ordered or wilfully permitted by the Japanese government or individual members thereof and by the leaders of the armed forces."

From beginning to end, said the court, "the customary and conventional rules of war designed to prevent inhumanity were flagrantly disregarded."

The tribunal, nearing the end of its 300,000 word judgment, said yesterday Tojo and his regime in plotting the attack on Pearl Harbor decided no declaration of war was needed before they struck.

Tojo and his associates, the court said as it continued reading the long verdict, decided that a final note handed to the United States "should not be permitted to destroy the element of surprise in the attack."

Ga. U. Head Nomination Is Deferred

By M. L. ST. JOHN

The Board of Regents yesterday granted Chancellor Harmon Caldwell's request for more time to make a nomination for President of the University of Georgia. Caldwell said he was not prepared at this time to make any recommendation.

There is a possibility that selection of the new President may be delayed until the membership of the Board of Regents is changed in January. Terms of some of the members expire Dec. 31, and re-appointment of some other members have not yet received Senate confirmation.

The Board yesterday approved Georgia Tech's request to purchase 65 acres of land from Judge E. E. Pomeroy for use by the Civil Engineering Department and the YMCA. The Tech "Y" will put up half of the $11,500 price.

The Board allotted the University of Georgia $217,000 of the $250,000 in new funds made available by Acting Gov. Thompson to compensate the University for loss of income from the Veterans Administration. It sent $25,000 to North Georgia College at Dahlonega for purchase of a building said to be worth $160,000. It gave the other $8,000 to the Georgia State College at Savannah to pay the salary of former President Benjamin Hubert.

The group also approved sale of about an acre of land at Albany, adjoining railroad tracks, to the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company for $450.

Pending the naming of a new President for the University of Georgia, Caldwell will commute between Athens and Atlanta, filling in as both President and Chancellor.

Prominently mentioned for the presidency are John E. Drewry, Dean of the Journalism School; Robert Stronier, former Georgia Dean now with the University of Chicago; G. H. Boyd, Dean of the Graduate School, and Ralph Thaxton, Acting President of Georgia State Woman's College at Valdosta.

SNPA Seeks Support for Negro School

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP)—The Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association asked for support yesterday of a Booker T. Washington Memorial as a "contribution to better race relations."

In a resolution, at its closing session, the SNPA said the memorial near Roanoke, Va., would improve "effective training of Negroes in the South."

The memorial is a program of trade and industrial training for Negroes. A replica of the Negro leader's birthplace has been built at the memorial site.

In other resolutions the publishers' group urged support of conservation and tree-growing programs in the South and asked encouragement of colleges in raising standards of their journalism departments.

The SNPA also agreed to continue its support of the Lee Memorial School of Journalism at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

Another resolution called on the Southern press to take an effective interest in "geographic acquaintanceship" between this nation and Latin-American countries.

The SNPA group commended a Newsprint Committee headed by Clarence Hanson, Jr., of the Birmingham News and Age-Herald, for development of the Coosa River Newsprint Mill at Childersburg, Alabama.

Mark Etheridge, General Manager of the Louisville Courier Journal and Times, explained operations of the Voice of America. He said most of the leaders of the government's propaganda program were Southern newspapermen.

He reported at least 12,000,000 Russians listen daily to shortwave Voice of America broadcasts. He added that 100,000,000 persons around the world saw documentary films about this country last year.

Community Self-Survey Regional Council Aim

Reforms in the field of civil rights in the South must be accompanied by "an improved economy and a sounder condition," Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, declared here.

Dr. Mitchell told delegates to the interracial group's fifth annual meeting in Atlanta yesterday that the Council can now offer "manual and technical assistance to Southern communities wishing to learn what their problems are and how to remedy them."

He proposed blanketing Southern communities with groups of citizens working for local improvements. Delegates outlined a "community self-survey" program calling for committees to gather facts about their home towns—sanitary and recreation facilities, public

Georgian Jailed In Massachusetts

Delinquency Among State Youth Down

Juvenile delinquency is on the decline in Georgia, according to State Prison figures.

The annual report of the State Board of Corrections, issued for publication today, shows fewer boys and girls below the age of 18 sent to the State Prison during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948.

There were 442 youths placed in the State Board's custody during this year, as compared with 463 in the preceding year. The close of the fiscal year found 374 youths still confined, as compared with 651 on June 30, 1947.

Most encouraging feature of the report was the decrease in youthful crime repeaters, the Board found. There were 84 repeaters as compared with 123 in the previous year. Not so encouraging was the fact that 194 were convicted of felonies (more serious crimes) as compared with 171 in the previous year. Misdemeanors declined from 282 to 248.

Convictions during the year included 159 white boys, 13 white girls, 240 Negro boys, and 30 Negro girls. The youngest prisoner both years was 13 years old.

C&G
BEFORE BROADWAY
HAD LIGHTS

The Great White Way was born when Broadway's first electric lights were turned on in 1880.

MEN TOASTED the opening of the Great White Way in midtown Chapin & Gore Kentucky bourbon. At that time, C&G was an established favorite with men who enjoyed its smooth, distinctive flavor, its heavy 93 proof.

Ask for C&G the next time. Reasonable in price, it is unsurpassed in quality. If you prefer bourbon, you'll insist on C&G.

Returns of the General Election from all but nine rural counties showed all 17 amendments winning by a majority of three to one.

The amendments authorize Fulton County to issue revenue certificates; to adopt a new definition of persons under the County pension system; to assess and tax without regard to uniform garbage services; to enlarge license taxes, and to extend the civil service and merit system.

Two amendments permit DeKalb County to name the County School Superintendent by the Board of Education rather than by election of the people, and to work with Fulton County in erecting stadiums.

Other amendments include: Spalding—To provide for election of a County Board of Education and appointment of a County School Superintendent by the Board.

Muscogee—Authorization to merge school systems of Columbus and Muscogee into a single county unit; placing the entire County, including Columbus, under a County Health Board.

Bibb—Authorization for Macon and Bibb County Zoning and Planning Commissions; a joint Board of Health for City and County.

Folk—Authorization for a nine-member County Board of Education which will appoint a County School Superintendent.

Johnson—Authorization for the Mayor and Council of Wrightsville to issue refunding bonds.

Coed Missing; Bloodstained Scarf Found

BOULDER, Colo.—(AP)—A University of Colorado coed has disappeared and a bloodstained scarf found on a country road near her was identified as hers by the girl's mother.

The girl is Theresa Catherine Foster, 18, of Greeley, Colo. Sheriff Art Everson said the ring and scarf were found near three pools of blood on Lee Hill Road, two miles Northwest of Boulder.

The pools were so large the rancher who first saw them believed a rustler had slaughtered one of his calves, Everson said. It was not until Miss Foster was reported missing that officers halted their hunt for a rustler and started a search for the girl.

Miss Foster, a freshman engineering student, was last reported seen when she left the Newman Club, an organization of Catholic students, at 10:15 o'clock. She asked for a ride to her rooming house, about a mile and a half away, but started walking when no one was going her way.

Dr. M. G. Messenheimer, at whose home she stayed, reported she had not been there all night. The University laboratory said blood and hair found at the scene were human.

Everson said he had no clues other than the scarf and ring.

There's nothing like 'em for results. Constitution Want Ads.

Uneasiness Clouds Rites On Armistice

By ALBERT RILEY

In a world of uneasy peace, Georgians will join other Americans today in observing Armistice Day on the thirtieth anniversary of the end of World War I—the war that was supposed to have ended all wars but didn't.

Throughout the State graying veterans of Verdun and St. Mihiel and Chateau Thierry will meet again to remember their lost buddies who died "to make democracy free" and have slept for 30 years "in Flanders Field."

Joining the veterans of 1918 will be their sons who had to go to war in '41 to fight an even grimmer war to preserve democracy and freedom only to find the peace they won in jeopardy again.

At American Legion posts throughout the State there will ring out the old songs—"Over There" and "Johnny, Get Your Gun"—and "Johnny, Get Your Gun" will be sung with fervor and prayers and subdued celebrations.

There will be some parades. Perhaps the largest in Georgia will be at East Point at 10:15 a. m., featuring a U. S. Marine Corps Drum and Bugle Corps from Fort Meade, S. C. Sponsored by the VFW, with American Legion cooperation, the parade will include the Third Army Band from Fort McPherson, Russell High and College Park High School bands, and the appearance of three beauty queens—Miss Jerry Long, "Miss Atlanta" of 1948; Mrs. Tillie Leach, "Mrs. Atlanta" of 1948 and little Grace Orr, "Miss Atlanta, Jr."

Planes from the Atlanta Naval Air Station will roar overhead as the parade proceeds to Hill Crest Cemetery where memorial exercises will include addresses by Rep. James C. Davis and Lt. Col. John H. Pruitt, Chief of the American Graves Registration Distribution Center of the Atlanta General Depot.

In Atlanta the Drum and Bugle Corps of Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, will parade down Peachtree Street from Baker Street to Five Points at 10 a. m. Legion officials will be met there by Army, Navy and Marine Corps representatives for a brief ceremony. A uniformed color guard will participate in retreat ceremonies at 5 p. m. at the Post No. 1 clubhouse, where a dance will be held, beginning at 8 p. m.

At Decatur the Harold Byrd Post of the American Legion will conduct ceremonies at 10 a. m. at the Decatur Boys High School athletic field with the Decatur ROTC unit parading.

Acting Gov. Thompson has proclaimed the day a holiday, with all Statehouse offices to be closed. Many Federal offices will be closed, as will city recorders' courts.

MEMORIAL STAMP

Poppy Lady Is Honored by YMCA Officials

Officials of the YMCA here yesterday honored the memory of Michael Michael, noted YMCA worker who originated the idea of Poppy Day in 1918 to commemorate the war dead.

Charles R. Younts, President of the Metropolitan Atlanta YMCA, purchased a sheet of Michael Michael memorial stamps from J. E. Greene, Sr., Assistant Superintendent of Finance, in a ceremony at the Old Post Office. Postmaster Lon Livingston witnessed the transaction.

Miss Michael, a native of Athens, conceived the idea of the poppy—the blood-red flower now worn by millions of Americans—while she was working at the YMCA Overseas Headquarters in New York, Younts said.

He said she made a personal pledge to wear a red poppy as a sign of remembrance of our war dead, after she read the famous poem, "In Flanders Field," during a lull in a "Y" War Workers Conference.

Atlantans will be asked to buy memorial poppies today by wives of veterans of World War I and II.

Cuban Is Questioned In Tech Student's Death

CARROLLTON—Joseph F. Abdoe, 24-year-old Cuban mechanic from Newcastle, Pa., has been lodged in the Carrollton jail for investigation in connection with the slaying of Carl "Buddy" Stevens, Georgia Tech student who was shot and beaten to death here two weeks ago.

Abdoe is the sixth person currently under arrest for questioning in the slaying, Carroll Sheriff B. B. Kilgore said. Kilgore said Junior Teal, Carroll County sawmill hand, and four Negroes are being held for investigation.

Abdoe was brought to Carrollton following his arrest in Chattanooga, Tenn., Kilgore added. He said Chattanooga authorities reported finding a foreign make pistol in Abdoe's possession which they thought might link him with the Carrollton slaying.

Dr. Herman Jones of the Fulton County crime laboratory has said Stevens was slain with an automatic.

However, Kilgore and Chief E. R. Thredgill, of the Carrollton police, said last night they could make no comment on the gun seized with the arrest of Abdoe until ballistics tests can be made.

Meantime, intense feeling over the brutal slaying of the Tech student and attempted assault of his girl companion continued to mount in Carroll County. Rewards for the arrest and conviction of the slayer totaled $1,250.

The County Commission swore in as a County policeman Denver the services of Rob Carter, a former Georgia State Patrol who was elected sheriff to succeed Kilgore. Commissioners insisted the incoming sheriff be permitted to work on the case before he takes office on Jan. 1.

In another move, the Commissioners launched a move to secure Gaston, a former member of the 1st Troop County officer, who has aided in the solution of many crimes over the State. They pointed out Carter aided Sheriff Lamar Potts of Newnan in the difficult Wallace case recently.

SEALED FUNDS

Poppy Sale Set Today

It's Poppy Day today in Atlanta.

Money received during today's Poppy Sale will be collected in sealed containers for the first time in the history of Atlanta's observance of the event.

Granger Hansell, President of the Atlanta Fund Appeals Review Board, said he had been trying for some time to make collections in sealed containers.

He continued, "This is a more business like approach to the street collection of funds. The American Legion Auxiliary, which sponsors Poppy Day, is to be congratulated on its civility in setting such a splendid example to other groups."

Hansell, an Atlanta attorney, is also President of the Atlanta Better Business Bureau.

Navy To Fly Hay To Elephants at Sea

ALAMEDA, Cal.—(AP)—"Operation hay" is ready to fly. The Alameda Naval Air Station is sending a giant Mars aircraft with six bales of hay to the Pacific Far East Lines' Swarthmore Victory, at sea 1,000 miles west of San Francisco.

The ship earlier sent an SOS to the effect that eight baby elephants aboard were out of food and there was danger of losing them.

The Air Station got authority from Washington to send a plane load of hay to aid the starving pachyderms.

The plane also will carry 2,500 mealy worms for tropical birds on the ships.

Besides the elephants and birds, the Swarthmore has a cargo of monkeys, ducks, snakes and cats. The zoo ship is due in San Francisco Sunday morning. Officials of the shipping lines say it is the Culver City at a cost of $18.45.

responsibility of the shipper to provide feed for the elephants and not that of the steamship company.

"The steamship company hasn't the faintest idea of how much an elephant eats... especially on a sea voyage," they said.

The rescue plane will take off early today.

The hay will be transferred by wrapping the bales in waterproof canvas and parachuting them to sea. Lifeboats will put out from the ship to retrieve it.

The worms for the birds had to be obtained from a bait shop in the Culver City at a cost of $18.45.

Your City Hall

By HERMAN HANCOCK

PAVING PLEDGE AIDED—City Council's Finance Committee yesterday decided to let Council decide Monday whether it will provide approximately $130,000 to pave about 25 street stretches City administration leaders agreed to pave prior to 1948. When housing shortages became acute, the administration agreed to help providing utilities for new construction, with the City agreeing to provide paving free if development make arrangements to finance other utilities. Finally, the demand pyramid, and the practice was discontinued after 1947. The commitments made prior to that time are the ones under consideration. Ald. Dowse Donaldson, Chairman of Council's Public Works Committee, will prepare the list, and if Council agrees to carry out its agreement, an effort will be made to provide the appropriation in 1949.

SCOTTISH RITE DONATION STUDIED—Councilman Ralph Huie, Chairman of Council's Finance Committee, will search the law between now and Monday in an effort to ascertain if the City can legally make a $500 appropriation to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. Councilman Cecil Hester, a Committee member, yesterday proposed the contribution, informing fellow members that other cities are contributing to the institution.

RECEPTIONIST APPROVED—A receptionist for the City Personnel Department today has the sanction of Council's Finance Committee. Personnel Director Carl T. Sutherland told the finance group he does not ask for "things we do not need and we need this." He said the receptionist will give applicants for City employment preliminary interviews, thus allowing other employees to proceed with their work uninterrupted. The pay scale will be from $150 to $175 monthly, to which the 40 percent cost of living bonus will be added.

SANDY SPRINGS WATER—City Council's Water Committee yesterday gave the green light to installation of the seven-mile-long $335,000 Sandy Spring water expansion program. The action followed announcement that the 200 paid-up applications needed to justify the outlay have been filed with the Water Department. Paul Weir, Waterworks Manager, said pipe deliveries are expected to begin about next March and the work probably can be completed late next Summer. The project contemplates the installation of a small pumping station and a large storage tank to insure a constant supply and pressure.

SPECIAL APPROPRIATIONS—City Council's Finance Committee yesterday apparently had adopted a policy of turning thumbs down on requests for any large or special appropriations for the remainder of the year. Practically every request for extra money was sent to the 1949 Finance Committee, which will map the city's fiscal program for the next year.

TORRAS VISITOR—Raymond W. Torras, retired Engineer-Secretary of the City Planning Commission, was a visitor at City Hall yesterday. He is now residing in Brunswick but attended a planning group session here during the afternoon.

ARMISTICE HOLIDAY—The City Hall will be closed today in observance of Armistice Day. All departments except those necessary to carry on needed functions will have a holiday. The building will open again at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

MAYOR'S DAY—Mayor Hartsfield spent most of yesterday in a series of conferences. He said he was worn out by the large number of callers who visited the executive offices and went home early for rest. Today he will speak at the American Legion celebration of Armistice Day in exercises to be held at 11 a. m. at Five Points. This afternoon he will go to Rockmart, returning tonight.

First Lt. Roy S. Mihlfeld, son of the Rev. Stephen Mihlfeld, of Clifton, has been selected as co-pilot on the B-17 "Bataan," sometimes used by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and members of his staff.

The Georgia flyer is stationed with Far East Air Force Headquarters in Tokyo. One of his first duties, on his arrival in September, was to fly the "Bataan" to Korea, where he picked up the President of South Korea and flew him to Tokyo for a visit with Gen. MacArthur.

First Lt. Mihlfeld trained as a photo lab technician at Lawson Air Force Base between 1940 and 1942. A brother, Sgt. C. E. Mihlfeld, is now stationed at Lawson.

Courts and County Affairs

CRACKDOWN—Tired of having to check cases because of absentee witnesses, Superior Court Judge Ralph Pharr yesterday sent deputy sheriffs for five, four of them Atlanta policemen. The policemen who were ordered arrested and held in custody till they testified were Sgt. W. D. Anderson and Patrolmen T. C. Kennon, S. S. Howle and W. D. Johnson. Two said they had forgotten about the subpoenas and the others said they had not received them. The arrest orders were cancelled when the men were brought into court. A. O. Cowan, a prosecuting witness in a burglary case, was hailed into court and fined $10 for failure to appear when the case was called.

LEGION SERVICE—Fulton County Chaplain Bill Allison will deliver the memorial address at the Armistice Day service of Legion Post 72 at 6:30 tonight. Another speaker will be Judge Bond Almond. The program will be conducted in the Legion Hall on Spring Street, near Cain.

ANCESTRY—"Do you know this man's reputation in the community in which he lives?" a lawyer in Judge Ralph Pharr's court asked a Negro witness. "Naw, sir," replied the witness, "I doan know nothing at all about his ancestry."

TOWNS THANKS CITY—County Commissioner-elect Jack Towns yesterday expressed thanks to the City of Atlanta and especially Waterworks Supt. Paul Weir and the Water Committee of City Council for their aid in securing water for Sandy Springs. Towns said if it had not been for their co-operation in extending the time limit for securing checks in advance from prospective water users on the proposed line, Sandy Springs would have lost its chance for city water.

HEY GEORGE—When Elmer Spout loses an election bet, he pays off—the hard way. The rotund, 200-pound bartender based his hopes of a free wheelbarrow ride on the banner of Gov. Dewey last week. Yesterday he found himself on the handle end of the vehicle. Inside the wheelbarrow was Edward J. Sweeney, 255-pound Trenton bartender. Sweeney shared Truman's confidence in victory. Spout commented as the trip started: "George Gallup should come out and help me push this thing." Gallup's poll headquarters is a few doors from Spout's tavern. . . . In New York Mrs. Amelia Marie Propper celebrated her 100th birthday—without looking backward. "No, it's much more lively today," she commented when asked if she ever yearned for the "good old days."

PLATE LIFTED—Sixty-year-old Alexander Bishewski, of Newark, N. J., was arrested on a charge of stealing his best friend's false teeth. Anthony Sarzara, Bishewski's 65-year-old roommate, said both his friend and his teeth disappeared from the room the morning of Oct. 30. Bishewski denied the charge. He said he had no need for the teeth. . . . Blonde, blue-eyed, shapely Patricia "Legs" Hall, who recently won a "most beautiful legs in the world" contest, has been signed by Universal-International Studio, which says it's looking for "new faces." Appropriately enough, she'll play the role of bathing beauty in her first picture. . . . Belle Baruch, daughter of financier and statesman Bernard Baruch, yesterday lost a $10,000 damage suit in Columbia, S. C. Federal District Court. The suit was brought by the estate of John Zozula, of Scarsdale, Pa., killed in the 1946 crash of Miss Baruch's airplane in Wichita, Kansas.

ARKANSAS TRAVELER—The widely-known tune, "Arkansas Traveler" now is the melody for the official State song of Arkansas. In 1912, the legislature adopted the song "Arkansas" as the official State song but it was discarded seven years ago when Eva Ware Barnett, composer of "Arkansas," threatened to sue over the copyright. . . . In Chicago, Rafael Villaseñor, 15, was reported named in a true bill charging him with slaying his 13-year-old playmate, William Gervais. He said he attacked William when the younger boy threatened to "snitch" about a perverted sex act they performed. . . . La Verne Andrews, of the singing sisters, will be married Friday to Louis A. Ruzgiero, record company executive. Both are 32.

NEEDLE WORK—"It might have been there for years, but I've no idea how it got there," said Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson, 93, as she left a Sudbury, Ont., hospital, 10 days after an operation removed a three-inch darning needle from her stomach. . . . Mrs. Truman plans to leave Washington today by plane to join the President on his vacation at Key West, Fla. . . . Walter P. Reuther, President of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, left Duke Hospital in Durham, N. C., yesterday en route to Detroit. An "exploratory" operation was performed last week in order to remove bone splinters and scar tissue which had been pressing on the injured nerve in Reuther's arm, injured last Spring in a shotgun attack in Detroit.

GOVERNOR'S FANS—Movie Stars Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, along with Movie Director Cecil B. DeMille, are scheduled today to be among Gov. elect Fuller Warren's guests at his inauguration at Tallahassee in January. . . . Actress Leslie Brooks got a divorce in Hollywood from Actor Anthony Shay who disappeared four months ago with their three-year-old daughter. . . . Georgia W. Catterjohn, of Paducah, Ky., predicted it will be at least three years—and possibly five—before there is an appreciable reduction in the cost of building homes. An officer of the National Concrete Masonry Association, Catterjohn was speaking before the closing session of its southeastern regional meeting in Miami.

Santa Claus Party For Children Set By Davison's

Lend an ear, kiddies. Although Christmas is more than a month away, you can start singing "Santa Claus is Coming to Town" now, for the jolly old fellow and his pretty little girl helper, Krissie Kringle, will visit Atlanta Saturday.

The occasion will be Davison's annual Santa Claus party for children at the Fox Theater. The two-hour celebration will begin at 8:30 a. m.

You'll be the guests, of course, of Davison's, but you'll have an opportunity to return the favor. This year Davison's is asking as many of you as possible to bring along a toy, new or used, in lieu of admission.

These boys will be turned over to the Salvation Army for dis-

Library Board To Hurry Plans

The Carnegie Library Board last night called on architects preparing plans for a $1,750,000 library expansion program to expedite their work so contracts can be let as soon as possible.

Californians Photograph New Comet

MT. WILSON, Cal.—(UP)—The new comet discovered this week in South Africa was photographed yesterday by Mt. Wilson and Mt. Palomar astronomers, who said it rivaled the famed Halley's Comet for brilliance.

Drs. Albert G. Wilson and J. C. Duncan said the new comet was the brightest seen in the Northern Hemisphere since 1927. The two astronomers used an 18-inch camera at Mt. Palomar to get the pictures.

They said the comet had a tail extending 25 degrees and had the brilliance of a second-magnitude star.

Dr. Edison Pettit, of the Mt. Palomar staff, viewed the comet through a six-inch telescope and said he computed roughly that it was moving west about seven minutes of arc a day and south about 25 minutes.

He said scientists could not tell whether the comet was moving away from the sun until its orbit had been computed.

Other pictures of the comet were taken here just before dawn with a 10-inch camera.

"This is the first brilliant comet we've seen for a long time," Observer J. O. Hickox said.

He said he observed the comet through a pair of seven-power field glasses from 5:45 to 6:10 a. m. PDT.

Then do as Millions do!

When you feel dull, headachy, sluggish because you need a laxative, chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT tastes like delicious, mint-flavored chewing gum. You chew it like gum! And scientists say chewing makes FEEN-A-MINT's famous medicine more effective—"readily" it is so it flows gently into the system.

And here's the amazing thing! The action of FEEN-A-MINT's special medicine detours the stomach! It acts, not in the stomach, but when it is farther along in the lower digestive tract... where this action should take place! Thus, it does not upset the stomach—leaves you feeling fine.

Women Good in Air; Aviatix Tells Why

By BILL BORING

We learn from one in a position to know that women are holding up America's advancement in the air.

They're assuming an "afraid of a mouse" attitude toward a plane simply because, in all too many instances, they think it the proper feminine slant.

It is largely for this reason that the country isn't well on the road toward a "hangar for every household," as was predicted for the postwar era.

So thinks Evelyn Greenblatt, Atlanta aviatrix, flying instructor and air industry executive. Something's got to be done about women, she thinks, if America is to maintain its top place in the Air Age.

Actually, something is being done. By the men. Here in Atlanta, for example. First time he mentions learning to fly, the man of the house recoils as the little woman gives out with a wild one. But a little later, he reassembles his forces and makes another stab. From then on, it's a war of attrition until he's taking lessons.

Then, by the same tactics, he works toward a plane. His wife, of course, never goes up until he takes her by the nape of the neck. Slowly, slowly there develops a flying family.

It isn't long then before mildity is at the controls. Not long, too, before she can handle the plane better than hubby. You know why? It's because women are better manipulators of instruments than men. More gentle and the airplane is something not requiring brute strength, says Miss Greenblatt. "It's easier flying than driving an automobile," she says.

GEORGIANNA: Talking Rock is a village in Pickens County. Legend has it that it got its name because years ago on the site where the town stands there was a rock upon which was inscribed the words, "Turn me over." But it was a huge rock and for years nobody turned it over. One Saturday afternoon, though, all the village boys got together and turned the stone over. On the exposed underside was the inscription: "Now turn me back again so I can fool someone else."

TO THE LAST PIPE: The Science Department of the State of Georgia is in receipt of the following letter: "Dr. Sir: I wrote you last year and you sent me some books on water that helped me very much in my school work. Now I want you to send me all the books and things you have on science as soon as you can."

QUIZ CORNER: "When he died he was literally loving a nation into peace."—A gravestone inscription, do you know whose?

FYI: Augusta's Broad Street is one of the world's widest. . . Ted Forbes, the textile man, tells of the South Georgia civic club which following the election repeated the Flag Pledge in this wise: "I pledge allegiance to the American flag and to the Democratic Party for which it stands." . . You've got 37 days in which to do your Christmas shopping, but only 20 in which to enter "In Our Town's" contest to select the most deserving institution (hospital, old-age home, veterans' group, etc., etc.) for the Philco television set, $1,000 value, which this column will give away. Presentation will be made on the basis of the letter putting up the best argument for a certain institution. If your letter is chosen, you'll get a handsome Philco combination radio and phonograph. . . You can see that apartment-size turkey the U. S. Agriculture Department has developed at the Turkey Show tomorrow at Lakewood Park. You know: the eight-pound bird that'll fit in any oven.

rected not against the way they are operated but against the lack of space and facilities. Nearly all the complainants believe that W. H. Brown, City Rabies Control Officer, and O. D. Owens, County Poundmaster, and their staffs are doing the best they can.

The Constitution went to take a look.

At the City pound, where between 20 and 50 dogs are impounded daily, dogs that have bitten someone are kept in separate off-the-floor cages for observation before being released to their owners.

The strays are divided into two categories—the lucky ones that are tagged and likely will be called for by their notified owners, and those without tags. These are lumped together in cages—male and female, puppies and adults, the sick and the well. The concrete floor has to be swept down constantly, with the result that the floor is generally wet, and cold in winter. As a result many dogs that might be claimed for adoption or by their owners, catch distemper or other diseases and die.

In the City pound strays are held 48 hours and in the County pound 72 hours and are then destroyed if they are not claimed. They are put to death in a box by carbon monoxide piped in from a truck exhaust, and this method is reputedly quick and painless.

The law is cruel, however, in the case of wounded or hopelessly ill dogs that are picked up. No matter how much they may be suffering, the City ordinance says they must be kept 48 hours before being put out of their misery.

The canine death row is a depressing sight. Here the dogs seem to sense impending doom. The loped hounds and the dirty, fluffy little poodles huddle together and look through the wire at you in mute appeal.

The crusaders in this canine cause believe the City and County should lump their resources, if necessary, and provide a bigger, better pound where the animals can be kept warm and dry, where the sick and the well can be separated, and where they can have outside runs, like those of veterinary hospitals and the Humane Society's shelter.

door open, and pushed her down. "I got my 12-gauge shotgun then and began shooting."

The mother, Mrs. George Morris, Sr., was near hysterical when they arrived, Jones and Booth said. The patrolmen added Bud Casey fled when Morris began shooting, but later returned to the scene and was arrested on charges of being drunk and held as a material witness.

When the police reached the Morris home Roy and Eugene Casey were lying in the yard. Both were riddled with squirrel shot from the single-barrel shotgun. Morris was waiting in the home.

In addition to the assault with intent to murder charge, an outstanding bench warrant charging abandonment was served on Morris, Sutton said. The Acting Chief added Morris previously had been arrested for abandonment, burglary, wife beating and swindling and had been under peace bonds several times.

Dr. Hodges told police he had custody of the two boys while litigation over them was in progress. He said also that he had been forced to bring the children to Texas in order to give them a "chance in life" after "so much bad publicity caused by their mother's many convictions in Georgia courts."

Well known to Atlanta police, Mrs. Hodges had been sentenced to jail terms three times for her participation in the lottery racket here. Her last conviction on a bug charge came in August, 1945, when she received one year in prison.

Her stormy police career, marked by a camera smashing, fights and alleged bribery attempts, started in 1941 when she was first arrested for bug activity.

Dr. Hodges and the two boys have been living in Wichita Falls for two years.

N. Y., Boston Ports Stilled By Walkouts

NEW YORK—(UP)—A wildcat strike by some 13,000 longshoremen tied up the New York and Boston harbors yesterday, halting foreign maritime trade including Marshall Plan shipments. It threatened to spread from Maine to Virginia.

With the West Coast shipping paralyzed for the past 70 days by another strike, the men who load and unload the freighters and passenger liners here rebelled against a new contract, approved by their own union leaders and by shipping companies, providing for a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

In the giant New York harbor, some 10,000 insurgent members of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association refused to go out on the piers when the boss stevedores blew their whistles at 8 a. m.

In Boston, according to the U. S. Maritime Commission, some 3,000 men were affected. The Commission said longshoremen still were on the job in such other big Eastern ports as Philadelphia, Baltimore, Hampton Roads, Va., and Portland, Me.

An 80-day "no strike" injunction

50 CHOICE BIRDS Turkey Show, Auction Slated At Lakewood

The gobble of turkeys will replace the stamping of rabbits at Lakewood Park tomorrow.

Some 50 choice Georgia turkeys will strut as the first annual Georgia Turkey Association Show and Auction gets under way in the Industrial Building at 10 a. m.

The birds will come from turkey farms all over the State and will be judged on meat quality.

The show is slated for the morning session and at 3 p. m. the birds will be auctioned off.

Jack Fortner, authority on turkey grading, will be judge of the show. George Farrar will be the auctioneer.

The turkey show will follow the twenty-fifth anniversary convention and show of the American Rabbit and Caviar Breeders' Association.

under the Taft-Hartley Law expired Tuesday midnight.

Indications were that other ports either would be affected before that time or on Friday when the vote is in. Joseph Ryan, I.L.A. President, said only one of 14 local unions reported so far had approved the new contract.

A strike on the Gulf Coast, tying up the entire U. S. Merchant Marine, might follow although wage negotiations there begin in New Orleans on Nov. 17 and union representatives have agreed to hold off a strike at least until Dec. 9.

The stevedores stayed on the job at the big Army base in Brooklyn, leading point for ships carrying supplies to U. S. occupation troops abroad.

The new contract had upped wages 10 cents from $1.75 per hour; had increased by 15 cents the $2.62½ cents per hour paid for night and weekend labor; provided retroactivity of increases to Sept. 15; improved vacation conditions and provided other benefits.

Fire-Routed Californians Return Home

SANTA ANA, Calif.—(P)—Fire continued to blaze through brush in remote reaches of the Santa Ana Mountains yesterday, but 1,500 evacuated residents of two canyons began returning to their homes.

With winds dropping to 15 miles an hour, some 700 fire-fighters hoped to bring the outbreak under control soon. Latest Forest Service estimates placed the total burned area at 48,000 acres, including last week's fire.

Only three small homes have been reported lost in the fire, one of the largest in recent years in Southern California.

Agents Swoop On Hollywood Dope Combine

HOLLYWOOD—(UP)—A multi-million dollar dope syndicate's headquarters in a fashionable movie colony apartment house was raided yesterday by police and Federal narcotics agents who arrested four men.

Raiding officers seized $25,000 worth of opium and said they believed the arrests may lead to the breaking up of a huge combine engaged in smuggling narcotics into the movie colony from Mexico.

Charged with violation of Federal narcotics laws were Milton Harry Burke, 39, Los Angeles; Rudolfo Teychea, 33, former Army captain, of Nogales, Ariz.; Francisco Lavat, 43, and Jose Romero Cazares, 28, Sinaloa, Mexico.

The raid came after George H. White, regional head of the Federal Narcotics Bureau, made a "buy" of three and a half cans of opium in San Francisco last week from Teychea, with an agreement that 43 cans were to be delivered here.

The ring used a truck carrying tomato cans and boxes labeled "tractor parts" in smuggling the dope. Officers seized the 43 cans of opium on the truck.

Cazares, driver of the truck, claimed he was not aware he was carrying dope.

"I don't know anything," he told officers. "I came to Los Angeles to buy parts for my tractor."

But White said he believed the truck was on a regular run from Mexico where the drug was produced. He said narcotics agents had been working for six years trying to run down the source of drug.

Lillybet's Baby Offered U. S. Diaper Service

LONDON—(UP)—Enterprising Americans have offered Princess Elizabeth's expected baby a free transatlantic diaper service, it has been revealed.

The National Institute of Diaper Service wants to supply the baby with diapers which would be flown weekly from the United States, and laundered in the U. S. too, because of the British soap rationing.

As an added touch, the Institute promised that the diapers would have royal crests embroidered delicately in a corner.

American publicity agents have moved in on the expected blessed event in a big way.

The royal couple have been offered a de luxe baby carriage with electronic devices to light him to sleep, fluorescent lighting and nearly everything else but radar.

Enough baby foods have been offered to feed the newcomer until his or her coronation, enough blankets to change them as often as diapers are changed, enough shoes to supply a family of centipeds.

However, Buckingham Palace is suspicious of presents which come from outside sources, scenting the odor of commercial goods-pushing, and most of the offerings will be declined, with thanks.

Amid all the other complications attaching to the birth of the royal baby, expected at any time after Sunday morning, the question has arisen now as to what will happen if there are twins.

From the mists of England's rich history, a myth has gained credence that if Princess Elizabeth bore male twins the second one born, not the first, would be considered heir to the throne.

"No" shouted outraged experts on precedence when the question was submitted to them.

They explained that under British laws of primogeniture, the first-born son is the elder. Thus, if Elizabeth had boy twins, the first one born would be next in line after her to wear the crown.

This custom was recognized by the House of Commons when in 1937 the question was raised whether Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret should rule jointly in event of the death of their father, King George VI, without a male issue. It then was ruled that Elizabeth, the first born, would succeed to the throne in the absence of a male heir.

If Princess Elizabeth gives birth to a daughter, she will succeed

The Deputy Sheriff said that the automobile was traveling south and the truck north at the time of the collision.

Opening lead: King of clubs. It is not good policy to play for a normal distribution of cards when declarer is able to protect himself against a bad break in a specified suit. A case of super caution that paid is recorded today.

South elected to open with a bid of one spade, which, while it turned out well on this hand, is of doubtful strategy. With hands containing five or more honor tricks, it is a choice of opening bids is available, that one should be chosen which is most apt to elicit a response from partner. Some players would open this hand with two no trump, for which bid the proper count of 22 points (5½ honor tricks) is held. Your scribe has a natural disinclination to do so on hands containing two four-card majors. If the suits were reversed that bid would receive his vote. Some players open such hands with one club. This would make it easy for partner to respond, for example, if he had five hearts to queen and perhaps another queen. Whereas he would pass an opening bid of one spade. When, in the actual bidding North jumped to four spades, South did not allow himself to be "shut out." He knew North did not have many high cards, but what he needed most, good trumps and distribution.

The king of clubs was opened and trumps cleared in two rounds. Had declarer gone blithely about his business on the assumption that hearts would break normally, he would have met with defeat. But at no additional cost, he set about protecting himself against an accident. He cleared the diamonds and the clubs winding up in dummy. By this time, he learned that West had had two spades, at least three diamonds, and five or six clubs, because of the overall (probably six since he had so little in the way of high cards). He could not, therefore, have many hearts, and in all probability was short in that suit.

The deuce of hearts was led from dummy and East followed with the three. (It would have done him no good to play the nine, because declarer would win the trick and follow with a low heart to dummy's seven, which would leave East's queen subject to finesse.) Declarer played the six which held the trick and the contract was assured.

Suppose West's singleton heart had been the nine, did you ask? Very well, the contract was still safe because West, having no more hearts to return, must give declarer a ruff and a discard. If West has another heart, it means the suit has broken and that is the only loser.

Mr. Wingate Clears the Air

Farmers of Georgia, attending the convention at Macon of the increasingly powerful Farm Bureau, yesterday heard their President, H. L. Wingate, call for a General Consumers Retail Tax—a sales tax—with no exemptions, and also for complete abolition of the ad valorem tax.

It was a courageous program and if applause means anything, the farmers and their wives were for it.

It was unique in that it was the first time in the history of the State that anyone had advocated a new tax and coupled with it, repeal of an old one.

Not until such a tax bill is presented can judgment be passed on its merits. But, we are glad that someone finally has had the integrity to come out and say where we are going to get the money we say we want to spend on education. Everyone else has promised it and praised the minimum education program without saying where the money would come from—a question The Atlanta Constitution has asked through two gubernatorial campaigns.

Mr. Wingate said that such a tax would give every child in every county a fair chance at education.

He also proposed that when such a tax is passed we quit dipping into the gasoline tax for general funds and use all of it for roads.

"If we are in favor of educating our children let us make up our minds we are willing to pay the bill," he said.

"If we want roads let us use the money we get from gasoline to build them."

Mr. Wingate's statement is a refreshing breeze in a long-present smog of evasion. We have never liked a sales tax. We don't like one now. Maybe there are others with other ways to raise the money for what we propose. If so, we await them with interest.

But, what the State must do is quit shilly-shallying around with lip service to the promises made to education, to public health, to the tubercular and to the aged and realize that such services can be had only by paying for them.

We are grateful to Mr. Wingate for finally speaking out in a courageous, statesmanlike manner. The State has needed it for a long time. What do the people want?

A Southerner in the Cabinet

With the exception of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, the presidential cabinets have been notable for the absence of any Southerner. The Deep South has been without any representation.

There now is speculation that President Truman may reward those States which opposed the Dixiecrats by selecting a Southerner for a cabinet position.

The Southerner who most deserves such an appointment, from the standpoint of work done, is Jonathan Daniels, Editor of the Raleigh News and Observer. Following in his father's footsteps, he left his job to join the President in his campaign. It was Daniels who provided the spectacular improvement in the presidential campaign speeches which began to make headlines with their colorful, remembered phrases skinning Dewey's record. He really went to bat and did not strike out.

Paul Porter, native of Kentucky, is another who, on the basis of willingness to go to bat, has earned consideration. He is a former resident of Georgia, having managed a newspaper at LaGrange, Ga.

National labor circles, with help from other sources, are prepared to urge Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, because of his position in support of the Truman administration.

THOMAS L. STOKES

A Game That Has About Played Out

WASHINGTON—There was one quite normal aspect of our otherwise very surprising election season this year which affords—for those who need it—the comfort of the familiar. It is typical of part of our national legend that luck seems to be going out. It explains something about the election itself. The stock market took a dive over election of a Democratic President. (It has since "rallied," as they say on "The Street," and then it fell again.)

This has been going on now for a long time. It happened every time a fellow named Franklin D. Roosevelt, a Democrat, got re-elected, and whenever "That Man in the White House" proposed something new. Yet, somehow, despite this reiterated signal for doom and perdition, our nation survived—quite remarkably!

People managed to get along. Business got better and thrived. The usual drop this year after the election was attributed in press reports to "the fear that business profits would be cut" with a Democrat to administer our affairs. Business profits are now at an all-time peak.

It is as amazing as the election itself that those who sit about that crap table in New York are still so wrapped up in their own little game and still look at everything, including elections, in terms of the day's take instead of getting out into the air and going up on a high place somewhere figuratively and taking a look at our great country and its people.

They should know, as evidently some still don't, that most people don't bother about them and their little game any more.

In the Republican Party of today there's something of the viewpoint of that cloistered crew and you don't have to take this on the say-so of a newspaper reporter, but on the word of a highly respected member of the Republican lodge in good standing, meaning Rep. Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, Speaker of the House in that Eightieth Congress. Joe Martin thinks the party had better build itself up among the people if it ever expects to get anywhere, and stop taking its cue from those fellows who have been sitting in on the crap game. That particular "smoke-filled room" of the Republican Party.

As a matter of fact, the stock market lost its standing many years ago as an arbiter of our affairs among those who sat about another table here in Washington and, day after day, watched eminent gentlemen of finance parade before the Senate Banking Committee and confess to the shenanigans that went on during the so-called "boom" of the late 1920s. What some people did with other people's money was a caution. Evidently many people have not yet forgotten.

Congress stopped all that by imposing a new set of rules on the crap game, the market settled down to routine, and most of us forgot about it. But, every so often, it arrogates to itself its old role of hobgoblin to try to frighten into line those we choose to govern us.

What went on in the high-rolling boom

JOHN MARVIN RAST

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. . . for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Hebrews 11:1, 6.

An English poster says that to win the world for Christ we should be like the men and women described by Thucydides 2,000 years ago: "They dared beyond their strength, hazarded beyond their judgment, and in extremities were of excellent hope."

Of such spirit has every high and holy achievement been secured. Our failures are traceable not so much to willingness to do the impossible as to unwillingness to dare the impossible.

May we not draw back, Savior, from any cause which would magnify Thy name. O think Thy thoughts in our minds. Throttle our impulses by the inflowing of Thy holy spirit; and in all life's relationships make us sharers and dispensers of Thy abounding joy.

RALPH MCGILL

'The Old Pops' And Truman's Victory

The "Old Pops" are news again. And, it seems to me that even the most rabid conservative, Republican or anti-Roosevelt person might take definite comfort from the Truman victory in at least one department—namely, the defeat of the Communist-dominated Wallace Party.

The Communists, and Wallace, were out to defeat Harry Truman. They never had any idea of winning. As late as mid-October the Wallace management was saying 4,000,000 votes would be a splendid "victory." They wanted to elect Thomas E. Dewey.

Strategy The Communists, who devised the strategy, figured they would be so dominated by the reactionary elements that after four years the swing to the left would be so pronounced as to benefit the Communists. So, the whole plan of the Wallace Party was directed not at winning but at defeating Truman.

In this respect, as was pointed out here before, the Dixiecrats were doing just as effective a job as the Communists in doing damage to the two-party system.

That both failed so signally and that both are so positively discredited is of enormous value to the American system and is a victory for conservatism—all things being relative.

'The Old Pops' It is important to the American considering his politics that he remember the European system is to have many parties—each committed to some form of economic ideology. Thus, the many parties of Europe, which have destroyed or greatly weakened the possibility of popular government.

The basic idea and strength of the two-party system is that it is that neither party is committed to any ideology or cause, but that each remain flexible enough to absorb whatever the people demand and present with strength.

Thus, we have the young Republicans calling on Harold Stassen again to head a reorganization of the Republican Party. And we have the present Speaker of the House, Republican Joe Martin, saying "The Republican Party must get closer to the people."

You find yourself, too, recalling the Populist Party and "The Old Pops."

In Georgia the late Tom Watson, a lion of his time, both as the Populist issue and as a man, was almost contrived a national victory. That Watson became soured and embittered and, after 1896, became another man, is a separate part of the story.

The Populists really won. The "Old Pop" spirit goes marching on.

In 1948 As a matter of cold fact, it was the "Old Pop" strength which won for Harry S. Truman in 1948. A third party must offer something to be of any political influence. The Wallace Party looked backward. It offered old statistics and the old issues of the early New Deal days. The Dixiecrats went all the way back and campaigned with the old revolts of 1860 against Abraham Lincoln. They offered nothing. Both were so obviously futile the people saw through them. Behind the Dixiecrats were sinister forces as dangerous to the future of America, as were the Communists behind Wallace. These forces were never in the open, as were the Communists. But they were there. The real story of the Dixiecrats is yet to be told.

In 1892 What made the Populists, at full strength in 1892, so vital a force in American politics, was their program.

In 1892 the Populists, who were the troubled farmers of America, were advancing these major planks:

1. A graduated income tax wherein a man paid on the basis of his earnings.
2. A "sub-treasury" plan whereby the government would build elevators and warehouses to store non-perishable crops on which farmers could get loans up to 80 percent of the crop value.
3. Postal savings banks wherein the savings would be guaranteed by the government.
4. A careful program of controlling natural resources as the heritage of the people and not the property of individuals.
5. Direct election of the President, Vice President and Senators.
6. For public works to absorb labor in depression.
7. Protection of the rights of labor against injunctions.

Laws These were the programs of 1892. Most of them did not become laws until 50 years had passed. Not all of them are laws today. The recent election had as three of its controversies the protection of tideland oil reserves for the Army and Navy; the protection of the public grazing lands of the West, and the development of rivers and valleys by the government.

The Truman victory was—in at least one degree—a victory for conservative progress as against the radical destruction of the normal American change within the pattern of our laws as proposed by Wallace and the Communists.

Truman Intervenes for China

WASHINGTON—President Truman has already made his bow, inconspicuously but significantly, his new role as the active shaper of American foreign policy. Almost before the ballots were counted, he wired to Washington from Independence, Mo., that in his opinion the crisis in China demanded positive American action. The policy-making doves were considerably flustered by the President's unexpected intervention.

The situation had been reviewed, however, before Truman's return in triumph to the White House. Before his departure, the Key West, he issued his interim directive. It was a brief order that the Marine garrison should not be withdrawn from the Communist-threatened North China port of Tsingtao, and that all steps should be taken to get American arms to the forces still resisting the Communists in the North China area.

Policy The positiveness and the speed of the President's action are both worthy of remark. For three years the Far Eastern policy of the United States has largely consisted of alternate bouts of hand-wringing and advice from the sidelines. The theory that the best policy was, in effect, to have no policy at all, was strongly held in the Far Eastern division of the State Department. It was also stoutly maintained by Secretary of State George C. Marshall. Doubts as to this theory's validity have only begun to arise when the recent intervention in China began to seem imminent. The President's intervention implies that a serious search for a positive China policy will now be made.

On the other hand, the particular steps the President has taken emphatically do not constitute such a policy. The Navy first proposed evacuation of Tsingtao, to avoid conflict with the Communist forces, as long as six months ago. The Navy stand has been strongly opposed by the Army.

The President has not settled the dispute in favor of the Marines remaining at their post. Perhaps the 3,000 men who are now at Tsingtao may even be reinforced, if V. Adm. C. Badger, commanding in China, considers this desirable. But the President's order does not require that Tsingtao be held at all costs. On the contrary there is every reason to believe that unless American policy changes further, the Marines will be withdrawn if and when a genuine Communist offensive develops in the area.

Plan The effort to expedite American aid to the non-Communist forces in North China also has peculiar overtones. The energetic ECA Administrator for China, Roger Lapham, has recently been in Washington, pressing a plan to bypass Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and to give direct aid to local Chinese forces resisting the Communists. Lapham's main motive is that the China leader, Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, is distrusted by the Generalissimo and has therefore not been supplied very liberally. Apparently the germ of Lapham's idea is contained in the Truman order, although no one seems to know whether or how the idea will be implemented.

It is thus obvious why the two steps ordered by Truman do not, in and of themselves, constitute a China policy. Holding the Marines at Tsingtao is a gesture, in the last analysis. And pressing for direct aid to such regional leaders as Gen. Fu means encouraging the present tendency for these men to break away from the Generalissimo's National Government. If this happens, the National Government will collapse. China will be divided between a number of war lords and the Communists. And the Communists, being far the strongest and best organized single element, will then take on and destroy the war lords one by one, until they control all of China that matters.

Too Late? The tragedy is that if the President had only ventured to beard Sec. Marshall in his den six months ago, instead of last week, an American effort in China might well have borne important fruit. While the State Department stood for the policy of having no policy, the Defense Department, and especially the Army, continued six months ago to advocate preventive American action. Now, however, the China situation has deteriorated to the point where even those who used to plead most strongly for action have begun to feel that American intervention will be a waste of effort and resources.

The gravity of this fact is hard to exaggerate. President Truman may want a positive China policy, but a policy can hardly be evolved when even China's friends assert that there is almost no hope. The prediction now is that the Chinese Communists will eventually take all of China down to and including the Yangtze Valley, which is approximately like Communist occupation of all of the United States as far west as Kansas and Nebraska. By accepting this outcome, we may avoid a heavy investment in Chinese aid. But the altered world strategic situation will then demand far heavier investments elsewhere.

Why Truman Won

Editor Constitution: I see by the papers where the editors, columnists and radio commentators are stymied and in a dither on just how another Democratic President was thrown back in the White House for four years, etc., etc.

My friend, I am going to let you in on my little secret from a dull, cotton-picking, peaceful, tax-paying, voting Democrat, formerly from Georgia, now of West Florida.

The simple solution is a four-letter word, odds, 15 to 1, lose Harry—wanta bet, the people put up their 1 to 15 and then voted their bet. How simple, certainly not complicated, if you give it a thought. The 47,000,000 that did not vote just put their bet on 15 to 1, lose Harry, then went home standing by their radio to watch their bet materialize.

Ellis Arnall

Editor Constitution: May I congratulate you on your initiative and vision in suggesting in your editorial in last Sunday's Constitution that Ellis Arnall may be made a member of President Truman's new Cabinet?

I agree with you thoroughly that Arnall has a real contribution to make on the national scene. A number of people have spoken to me about the editorial in most laudatory terms.

Atlanta. ALEXANDER F. MILLER.

Harris Bubble

Editor Constitution: Some days ago your good paper carried a news story giving the names of a number of prospective candidates for the 1950 gubernatorial campaign. Among the number was Roy Harris, of Augusta. Since then the Nov. 2 Democratic nationwide election came along. It swept all the opposition in the trash pile and Mr. Harris' Cracker Party and his Dixiecrats were buried deeper than all the balance. It is quite evident that since the Nov. 2 storm we shall not hear of Mr. Harris' gubernatorial bubble again. Little politicians will learn after while that good old Georgia is a Democratic State.

Atlanta. JOHN H. ANDERSON.

Dead Elephant

Editor Constitution: Tradition says that no one has ever found a dead elephant in his natural habitat. They don't know just where they go to die, but recently a certain "Party" trailed a sick elephant until they found him, dead, at GOP headquarters!

Atlanta. DEMOCRAT.

Trends

Editor Constitution: Wellington Wright's story in the business section of The Constitution on Nov. 4, "Labor Government Rises to Power in America," was probably obscured by the welter of repercussions on the Truman victory. Interesting are the opinions of Atlanta bankers and businessmen that "the trend towards socialization of American business is much more widespread than anybody thought." These men realize that we cannot turn the calendar back 16 years, as the Republicans expected to do when they nominated Tom Dewey at a Grundy-dominated convention at Philadelphia.

President Truman needs strong men and perhaps he will have a coalition Cabinet with such progressives as Vandenberg and Stassen. The Russians would then know that we are a united people, intent upon the establishment of peace in a world which they continue to harass with such truculent insolence.

Winder. MRS. R. W. BALLARD.

Glad To Eat Crow

Editor Constitution: Just a few months ago I wrote a letter which was printed in "Pulse of the Public." I predicted the election of our next Governor, Hon. Herman Talmadge. Also I said President Truman would be defeated. I'm glad both ways. We got the best man for Governor, and without doubt, Mr. Truman is the best we could get for President.

So I am glad to "eat crow" for once in many years' guessing elections. This time it will taste more like good old Georgia turkey because all good Georgia Democrats are thankful.

Atlanta. AMOS Z. SHIPP.

Wake Up

Editor Constitution: The election to the presidency of Harry S. Truman means that if Mr. Truman continues his genuine position that the threat of Communism in the United States is a "red herring," the Communists will take over this nation long before his (Truman's) term expires.

Any man, be he President or the most humble worker, who thinks that the Russian Communists are not planning to take over America, the largest Fifth Column is now safely biding its time right in Washington, one who disputes this is either a fool or a traitor.

It is hoped that the President will wake up. If he doesn't he may find himself impeached.

College Park. CHARLES BYRON CONWAY.

'Christmas Gift'

Editor Constitution: What is the importance of having the Governor-elect inaugurated in November instead of January when it calls for many thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money to call an extra session of the Legislature to do so?

If it is a Christmas present, let those who desire to bestow such lavishments pay the bill, or better still have the Governor-elect pay for it. Why can't he wait for the regular session when it costs the taxpayers so much for this indulgence?

Atlanta. CHAS. P. COPELAND, M. D.

JOHN MARVIN RAST

And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening, knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him.—Ephesians 6:9.

When Charles Kingsley and his wife established their home they asked themselves what should be their attitude toward those who would work with them.

They looked up in the New Testament all the passages which have to do with such relationships. Naturally there was not in that house snobbery, cold looks, harsh words. There was naught but courtesy and mutual helpfulness.

Christianity rules out the ancient master-servant mental set. It transforms all sanctions and procedures by applying the test: What do they do to personality? Do they exalt and enrich it or abuse and degrade it?

At the Heart of South America

COCHAMBA, Bolivia—This ancient city lies at the heart of South America, in the center of the Andes Mountains, almost equidistant between the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts. It is the breadbasket of Bolivia, and the transportation crossroads of South America. Here all air lines flying north and south and east and west intersect. It is a strange city, sitting in a fine green valley 8,250 feet above the sea, surrounded by snow-capped peaks.

To visit here is like, one must suppose, visiting the North American continent nearly 100 years ago. Bolivia now stands where our American West stood in the 1800s. The first transcontinental railroad only now is slowly working its costly way up the great peaks from Brazil. The first great wave of immigrants, most of them from North Europe, many of them the displaced persons made homeless by the Germans, have just begun to come, bringing new vigor to the ancient Spanish blood.

It is destined, once there are all the modern forms of transportation, to be one of the great cities of the Southern continent. Here the finest airplanes land, but here still the burro trains and the llama packs dispute the narrow unpaved mountain trails with rare trucks and passenger cars.

It is a pleasant land to live in, dry and cool, averaging only 80 degrees the year round, with a rainfall moderate but adequate. And now, it seems, is the best time of its year. As North America snuggles down for the winter, with corn in the shock and the cotton all gathered, the Bolivia of the altiplano, the great high plain which averages 13,000 feet above sea level, is moving out of Spring into Summer—the season of the rains. In the next few months, if nature is kind, in the cleft of the valley's high plateau, the Indians will grow their potatoes and their grain, and in the high valley of Cochabamba there will be peaches and strawberries. If nature is not kind on the high tableland—little is lost but the labor of planting. The Indians of the altiplano does not cultivate. He plants and leaves the rest to the gods. If there is rain and warmth, there will be good crops. If there is no rain, and the thermometer drops 60 degrees in 24 hours, as it sometimes does, there will be no poverty. He will live on the wages he makes in the tin and the tungsten mines between the planting and the harvest time.

Not all of Bolivia, of course, lies in the high slopes of the Andes, or in the deep Cochabamba valley. Three hours to the east, one can look down from snow-capped peaks into tropical jungles where white men have never been. And though it is hard, while flying the Andes, to understand how the great Inca civilization grew up in a world so barren, so lofty and so dry, it all becomes clear when once you see the tangled swamps where the headwaters of the Amazon rise. The peaks might have been bad, the jungles were worse.

Someday, maybe a thousand years from now, when we know a little more about conquering nature, and are finally driven to making more room for the teeming peoples of the earth—all this land may be a paradise of riches. The mountains will yield up their minerals—the jungles, cut and drained, will produce food for millions.

Then drowsy Cochabamba, lost now in the high peaks of the Andes, may look upon New York as New York now looks upon Rome—as the fading capital of a race in whose hearts the fire of achievement has died out, and the land that cradled one great civilization may be the birthplace of another.

FRED OTHMAN

They Had To Write a New Dictionary

WASHINGTON—Now we've got the U. S. Senate, the Federal Trade Commission and big business tangling with a subject so complicated that the boys had to put out a special dictionary, translating their own gobbledegook, so they could understand themselves.

In all my years in this weird and wonderful town, I've never run across anything quite like this basting point freight rate squabble, with its mill net returns, market interpenetrations, phantom freight rates, postage stamp pricing practices, and nonbasing-point mills.

Even with their glossary under their noses, the Senators admit they are puzzled, while the business moguls claim they never can tell when they are going to jail for breaking a rule they didn't know existed.

Allice never found anything more startling in wonderland. At the same time it is important to us all and so, with your permission, I'll make a stab at trying to explain the deal in plain English.

For 100 years, or maybe more, America's biggest steel mills, cement factories and such-like have been selling their stuff all over the land, delivered to the customer at the same price whether he was 20 miles from the plant, or 2,000.

Along came the Federal Trade Commission a while back to say this wasn't fair. Or why should the fellow who lives across the street from the foundry in Pittsburgh be forced, every time he buys a sack of bolts, to help pay the freight on an identical sack of ironware headed, say, for San Francisco?

The manufacturers said, nuts. They appealed to the courts and to their dismay earlier this year the Supreme Court, itself, ruled that the Trade Commission under the law was boss. Boy! Such a scramble in business and Federal circles you never did see.

Various segments of the government put out more than two score rules, regulations and interpretations, which, when added up, made no sense to the lawyers. Gobbledegook seemed to be confound gobbledegook. Some businessmen claimed they were ruined; others actually began moving their plants closer to their sources of supply. Prices on a lot of items soared and pandemonium (a word I have chosen advisedly) reigned. That's where Sen. Capehart and Company came in. They're investigating, to see whether they ought to clip the claws of the Trade Commission.

So the business, chieftains, the counselors, and the Government hotshots descended upon the Senate caucus room to bend the ears of the Senators with their troubles.

And ruddy-faced, gray-haired John M. Hancock, director of a dozen mighty corporations, told the Senators that he pitied 'em, trying to unravel the knotty legal wool (his phrase) in which the whole problem is wrapped.

He said just because all the big makers of items in the same line had identical prices was no sign they were conspirators against the American public. This indicates, he continued, that their prices have been hammered down by competition to the lowest possible levels.

That's the trouble, he said. The gents in Government seem to think that most business men at heart are crooks, though Hancock used the words, "inherently law violators." He said he couldn't understand the rules; that he knew of no attorney who did, and that he hoped the Senators could do something about scraping away the legal fuzz. Their decision will affect 50 billions in plant investment, he said, and 16,000,000 jobs.

The Government fellows will get their say later. What happens then, I don't know. Neither do the Senators. As of now they're studying their glossaries. And if I've hurt the feelings of any great men, it's their own fault; they should have talked in English.

The Country Jolly Well Deserves It

(Copyright 1944 by the Baltimore Sunpapers. Reprinted by special permission.) The super-ultra-explosion that staved in the firmament of heaven Tuesday of last week not only blew up all the Gallups of this great free Republic; it also shook the bones of all its other smarties. Indeed, I confess as much myself. Sitting among my colleagues of the Sunpapers as returns began to come in, I felt and shared the tremors and tickles that ran up and down their vertebrae.

How could so many wizards be so thumpingly wrong? How could the enlightenment play so scurvy a trick upon its agents? Certainly there must have been very few Americans in the IQ brackets above 35 who actually expected Truman to win. I met a great many politicians during the campaign, some of whom whooped for the right hon. gentleman and some of whom whooped against him, and yet I can't recall a single one who showed any sign of believing that he could beat the rap.

Even his running-mate, the Hon. Alben W. Barkley, who hollered in Baltimore on Oct. 25, was plainly full of doubts. A professional jobholder and rabble-rouser for 43 years, he did his stuff as in duty bound, but if there were any high hopes welling within him he certainly kept them concealed from the customers. His general air was that of a country pastor preaching the funeral services of a parishioner plainly bound for hell, and all the other jobholders present looked and acted a good deal more like pallbearers than wedding guests.

But, meanwhile, the Missouri Wonder was moving and ravaging the land, pouring out hope and promise in a manner. To the farmers he promised a continuance of the outrageous prices that are reducing the rest of us to eating only once a day. To the city proletariat he promised ever higher and higher wages, with the boss a beggar at his own gate. To the jobholders he promised more and more jobs, and juicier ones. To the colored brethren he promised the realization of their fondest hopes and hallucinations. And so on to the glorious end of the chapter.

What had Dewey to offer against all this pie in the sky? Virtually nothing. His plan in the campaign, as in that of 1944, was to chase what appeared to be the other fellow's ambulance. He seemed eager to convince everyone that he was for everything that Truman was in favor of, but with much less heat. Never once in his canvass, so far as I can recall, did he tackle Truman's buncombe and blather in a frank and forthright manner. His speeches were beautiful songs, but all of them were sung pianissimo.

His literati have been blamed for this tender gurgling, but it seems to me that the fault was all his own. The late Al Smith, in the campaign of 1928, was afflicted by literati even more literary, but he got rid of them by tearing up their speeches and striking out on his own. To be sure, he didn't do that; that was surely not because he did not make a good fight; it was simply because the Bible-searchers everywhere had become convinced that if he got to the White House the Pope would move into the cellar.

Dewey had no such handicap and yet he came to grief in the grand manner. His defeat ran against all the probabilities and was complete, colossal and ignominious. Its springs, I believe, are to be sought in defects of his own personality. He is by nature cute but cautious. He is a good trial lawyer, but an incompetent rabble-rouser. He addresses great multitudes as if they were gangs of drowsy judges, all of them austere in their hangmen's gowns, but consumed inwardly by an expectant thirst.

Truman made no such mistake. He assumed as a matter of course that the American people were just folks like himself. He thus wasted no high-falutin rhetoric upon them, but appealed directly to their self-interest. Every one of them, he figured, was itching for something, and he made his campaign by the semipaternal device of engaging to give it to them. A politico trained in a harsh but realistic school, he naturally directed his most gaudy promises to the groups that seemed to be most numerous, and the event proved that he was a smart mathematician.

Neither candidate made a speech on the stump that will survive in the schoolbooks, but those of Truman at least had some human warmth in them. Like Al Smith, he frequently disregarded the efforts of his literati, and proceeded on his own, and it was precisely at such times that he was most effective. While Dewey was intoning essays sounding like the worst bombast of university professors, Truman was down on the ground, clowning with the circumambient morons. He made votes every time he gave a show, but Dewey lost them.

One of the most significant phenomena of the campaign was the collapse of Henry Wallace's effort to convert the plain people to the Russian whim-wham. They simply refused to be fooled, and if the battle had gone on for another month his support would have been reduced to the Communists. At the start Truman was plainly afraid of him, but only at the start. It soon appeared clearly that all the actual Progressives behind Wallace were made uneasy by the Communists' collaring of him, and in the most of them were fetched by Truman.

He was out to get all the softheads, and he got them triumphantly. Unhindered by anything resembling a coherent body of ideas, he was ready to believe up to the extreme limits of human credulity. If he did not come out for spiritualism, chiropractic, psychotherapy and extra sensory perception was only because no one demanded that he do so. If there had been any formidable body of cannibals in the country he would have promised to provide them with free missionaries fattened at the taxpayers' expense.

So we now have him for four years more—four years that will see the country confronted by the most difficult and dangerous problems presented to it since 1861. We can only hope that he will improve as he goes on. Unhappily, experience teaches that no man improves much after 60, and that after 65 most of them deteriorate in a really alarming manner. I could give an autobiographical example, but refrain on the advice of counsel. Thus we seem to be in for it. I can only say in conclusion that the country jolly well deserves it.

THE QUESTION:

Are you thankful for what you have and what you are?

THE ANSWERS:

CHARLES H. HOOD, Mountain View, Ga., postal clerk—Yes, I think I am. I'm thankful that I'm here, because I had three head operations, all serious. I credit my recovery to the prayers of my wife and pastor, and the expert attention of my doctor.

My wife has been a good mother to our two little boys. She's a wonderful homemaker. My children are certainly a joy to have.

DAVID LOVETT, 4670 Dudley Lane, N. W., stock counting clerk—Why, yes. I'm glad I'm here and not over across the waters. I can live like I want to and do what I want to. I mind my mother, but I don't have to be under a dictator. There are a lot of things I like to do. Mostly, I like to live with flowers. Growing flowers is my hobby. Next, I like to bowl and I like to fish. Most of all, I'm glad that I don't have a dictator to tell me what to do.

MRS. WILLIAM DANIEL, 1190 Sheridan Rd., N. E., housewife and mother—I certainly am. I have a home in which to live while my husband is in medical school, which is very rare. I think most of the students out there are living in trailers. I have a mighty fine little boy. He's two and a half years old. That's one thing to be thankful for. He has a pair of wonderful grandparents. My husband graduates in two years. That will be one of the most wonderful days in our lives.

Their Job Is the 'Known Soldier'

NEW YORK—The Unknown Soldier sleeps on in his marble tomb atop a graceful green rise in Arlington. Thirty years after the war that claimed him, he remains, as the legend on the marble reads, "Known But to God."

Perhaps some day there will lie beside him the Unknown Soldier, or Sailor, Marine or Coast Guardsman of World War II. In the interim, our patient and humane quartermaster general's office continues the enormous job of identifying and returning home thousands of servicemen who died in a war which the Unknown Soldier could never have comprehended.

The offices in New York and San Francisco will be too busy today with the dead of World War II to be able to ponder the sacrifice of the unknown troops. Their job is the "known soldier," how best to deliver his remains to his next of kin and assuage their grief.

ABOUT 1,000 veterans of World War II, all combat men of every rank, are the escorts of World War II's dead. Nearly every hour some part of the soil of America receives the bodies of Americans who gave their ultimate devotion to their country in places that were but names on a map in the days before Pearl Harbor.

More than 600 of these escorts are based in New York, busy with the task of accompanying the arriving dead of their final resting places in national or private cemeteries. They, and their opposite numbers in San Francisco, have done a magnificent job in a difficult role. In a constant world of tears and re-broken hearts they provide the majesty of the United States Government and its official, humble gratitude and respect.

Sixty-two percent of all the families of American boys who died overseas have asked the Government to return the bodies. A vast majority of the remainder preferred to leave the bodies in the cemeteries that today mark the earth from two to the Elbe, from Greenland to Dakar. But 16,000 next of kin have never been located by

Prophecy for Near Future: Carols on July 4

By DORIS LOCKERMAN

Marguerite Steedman, the Atlanta writer who has a sharp and amused focus on history, has published a feature on Grandma in the current issue of Mademoiselle's Living. It's titled "With Loving Hands," and begins pungently: "A Victorian lady always had two things on her hands . . . time and fancywork."

It's about the "elaborate improbabilities that Grandma made for her family and friends in the more leisurely mauve decade," and present them as Christmas gifts. "Grandma wrought astonishing things," Miss Steedman wrote, "a workbasket from a discarded pumpkin shell; a beaded wire cover to fit over a lamp chimney (the latter was supposed to prevent dust from clogging the wick—but didn't); a cardboard cigar stand that must have quickly dried out Grandma's choice cheroots; a velvet-and-cardboard-sheet-music case, supposed to keep dirt and wet from little Phoebe's music lessons, but which more than likely fell apart with the first drop of rain."

The current issue of Living is heavily Atlanta. Margaret Gayle, who commutes between Atlanta and New York in her busy freelance writing job, wedged in with directing a household, has contributed a five-year toy plan for gifts for youngsters, called "Basic Plot for Santa Claus."

"Santa Claus is not the haphazard old gent he used to be," Mrs. Gayle says, "the pink-cheeked old rascal has developed a passion for planning."

December in June?

And this may be as good a time as any to remark that if somebody doesn't do something about the trend toward early Yuletide windows and propandias, we're going to have to decide between fireworks and Christmas carols on the Fourth of July.

Like Autumn hats in June, black dresses in July, and wool suits in early August, it has really gone too far. There was a time when the day after Thanksgiving began the rush in earnest, with those careful souls who "shop all year," watching the riot in objective disdain.

Being a last-minute buyer, and subject to the exhilaration of tinkling bells, happy children, brisk air and memories of the wondrous song of hard white snow passing under the runners of a sleigh, I have always regarded the extra early shoppers with the same suspicion I do the people who answer personal letters the moment they are received, or who jump up from a fine dinner to belabor the dishes into cleanliness.

It always seems like a chore to be done with and quite a distance from the great excitement of Christmas.

All Out in the Wash

Friends of soignée Marguerite Monerief Wellborn will be glad to know she has not dyed her hair red permanently. It is only a wine, and will look just like the glowing titten with her on the stage of "Life With Father," when it opened last night in the Atlanta Theater Guild production.

Mrs. Wellborn is playing Vinnie, the patient, pretty Mama, who proves the adage, theatrically, that you'd better never underestimate the power of woman. She and her four stage sons merely had to tint the hair while Father, who is George Bush, had to find a wig. Mr. Bush, you see, hadn't enough hair to take the tint.

Coincidentally, Jane Wellborn, Mama's daughter, has written that she is playing in the same drama this week at the University of Iowa, and that she missed the redhead role by being cast as Nora, one of the maids in the play.

IDA JEAN KAIN SAYS:

Feet Must Have Care

The average woman's weakest spot is her feet . . . and authorities imply it's often due to vanity. Women buy shoes to fit their fancy—not their feet.

A common mistake is to go into a shoe store and buy shoes without having both feet measured. It's not at all unusual for the foot to be slightly larger than the other, in which case the larger foot must be fitted. Another foot trouble-maker is to insist blithely on say a size five triple A—measurements to the contrary. Because a size was once a perfect fit is no guarantee it always will be. Poorly-fitted shoes cause untold—and unnecessary—harm and discomfort.

Too-short stockings are almost as bad as too-short shoes. Stockings must be one-half inch longer than toes when standing, otherwise they restrict and cramp the foot.

Planned exercise is highly important to foot health. The bony structure of the foot is made up of two arches—the longitudinal arch which runs the length of the foot, and the metatarsal arch which extends under the bones of the soles of the foot. Muscles and ligaments help support the foot in proper position. The entire structure is often weakened or strained through abuse.

A corrective exercise for strengthening the arches—particularly the longitudinal arch—is to rise on the balls of the feet and, holding onto something to maintain balance, do a partial deepknee bend. Up and down again, and again. The bend need not be deep . . . the value is in exercising on the balls of the feet with the weight of the body on the arches. Holding onto something for balance makes this a double-duty exercise—the bend can be made with back straight, abdominal muscles up and in, pelvic girdle pulled into line.

Of course, the best foot exercise is correct walk—heel placed down squarely, weight shifted down the foot more toward the outer than the inner border, toes gripping and shoving off.

For feet that are weary from prolonged standing—which is incidentally is much harder on feet than walking—a circulation stimulator is helpful. One plan is to splash hot and cold water over feet and legs. Sitting on the edge of the bathtub, let the water flow at full force, alternating hot and cold, finishing with cold, and rubbing briskly with a rough towel.

And probably the greatest foot saver of all is to keep weight at normal, for feet do have to carry the load. When I asked a friend who had taken off 30 excess pounds where she noticed the difference most, without hesitating a second she replied: "In my feet!"

This illustrated lecture is planned especially for YWCA members, by Mrs. Cecil Arledge, Chairman of the Membership Committee, but other persons wishing to attend the class may join the "Y" when they come. Reservations should be made.

HE BLAMES LONG SKIRTS

Wolf Whistle Is Vanishing

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP)—A male official of a hairdressers' association stood right up to 35 women and told them what he thought of—women.

They blindly follow the dictates of fashion to the point where they appear like "a cabbage in full bloom," he said.

The speaker was Marcus Tushnet, President of the New Jersey Association of Master Hairdressers. He didn't even ask that his name be kept secret.

"The wolf whistle is becoming a thing of the past with the introduction of long skirts," this lone man told the New Jersey Business and Professionals' Women's League, "and the walking habits of the females have been changed to a mincing step too short to get anywhere."

"All this talk about their wanting equal rights is silly as long as the females blindly heed the stren call of present-day fashion dictators."

THE FAUN—For the young

in face as well as heart, Guillaume of Paris "The Faun" coiffure above. Shown recently at Lenthier's New York Salon, this fauna-like hairdo is brushed out and up at the sides to give width, and down to a tapering point at the nape of the neck, the whole thing presenting a triangular effect.

"Little Meat" Dishes go a long way in budgeting, and satisfy a fondness for the taste and flavor of meat. Combine cooked macaroni, corn and cooked sausage meat, season well and spoon into scooped-out firm tomatoes. "Hot it up" as the English say, just before table time. Or—brush rectangles of biscuit dough with melted butter or margarine and spread with seasoned, ground tidbits of beef, lamb or what have you. Roll up, bake and serve hot. For more ideas, read on.

DEFT FINGERS FLY TO AID WORLD FELLOWSHIP WEEK

Business girls, Misses Mary Frances Lane, left, and Ruth Stripling, complete their handcraft for sale at YWCA Folk Festival and Bazaar next Friday evening.

LACING ON TROLLEY

Young Business Girls Rush Handcrafts for Bazaar

If you find yourself fascinated by the sight of a pretty girl passenger serenely lacing a thong of leather into a billfold as your streetcar lurches toward the city, don't think it is the latest, clever trend of salesmanship.

She will probably be a member of the YWCA class desperately trying to finish up her homework in time for the Folk Festival and Bazaar next Friday evening.

Young business girls who have found there is no relaxation from typing and filing quite like creative work with their own hands, have promised to equip a booth of handcrafted articles for the bazaar. These will be sold to benefit the World Fellowship Fund, along with the other commercially designed and produced items which will be offered the public in exchange for script known as Shares in World Fellowship.

The World Fellowship Fund, incidentally, has been established two years, and is a national YWCA effort for money to reconstruct and revitalize services for women and children in foreign countries where they have still not been able to re-establish hopeful, orderly living.

Aside from the leather work, one of the most popular crafts is based on the use of shells . . . a new kind of shell game that makes delicate, translucent dogwood earrings and bracelets out of tiny white shells; fragile perfume bottles trimmed in daisies and tiny roses for perfume bottle collectors; and jewelry of sequins, beads and shells that are usually sold before the deft fingers making them put

SALLY FORTH Says:

Oscar Oldknows To Arrive To Attend Niece's Wedding

Pretty Margaret Mundy, in addition to being excited beyond words over her marriage to Sam McKenzie, of Montgomery, which takes place on Nov. 20, has just received another thrill. Her aunt and uncle, Louise and Oscar Oldknows, of Bel-Air, Cal., will arrive the latter part of this week to be guests at the Georgian Terrace until after the wedding and to be on hand for all of the parties incident to the wedding.

The only fly in the ointment, so to speak, is that the Oldknows' son, Billy, will not accompany his parents to Atlanta. Last Sunday his engagement to Tina Skouras, lovely brunette niece of Charles Skouras, President of Fox West Coast Theaters Corporation, was announced, so he is too busy with his own affairs de coeur to leave California at the moment. Billy met and fell in love with Tina while she was attending Scripps College in Pomona, Cal., it seems.

Margaret will wear the lustrous ivory-tinged satin gown which her cousin, Jean (Mrs. Otis, Jr.) White, of Greensboro, N. C., wore at her wedding, and the imported silk illusion veil belonging to Gloria (Mrs. Donald) Talmadge, of Hampton, Va.

The de Sieyes Are Coming

About the best news Marion (Mrs. Edgar) Upton and her mother, Mrs. Harry Stearns, have had in quite some time is that Alice (Countess Bernard) de Sieyes, of Buenos Aires, and her daughters, Valerie and Anne, will arrive on Dec. 3 to spend Christmas as their guests at their Peachtree Street home and to remain with them for three months. Count de Sieyes will join his family later in the month.

It so happens that the date on which Alice and her daughters reach Atlanta is Anne's tenth birthday anniversary, so Marion and her mother will have to stage a double celebration—one over the arrival of the entire family, and the other in celebration of Anne's birthday.

A Cruise on the Carolyn

Recently Jan and Rhodes Perdue invited Martha and Smack Garlington and Alice and Dick Sawtell to accompany them on a cruise on their yacht, the Carolyn, and, of course, the foursome jumped at the opportunity.

Ten days ago the Atlantans left for Sea Island, where they boarded the Carolyn and steamed along the inland waterways until they reached Baltimore. During the intervening time, they have cruised up and down both the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay. They fished a little and did a lot of sight-seeing.

The Perdues' attractive daughter, Jan, who attends Foxcroft School in Middleburg, Va., joined her parents and their guests for a weekend in Washington.

The rich, buttery flavor of hard sauce makes it a natural for Brown Betty or other hot puddings. Work one-half cup butter to a soft cream with a fork, add gradually one cup powdered sugar, moistening the mixture with about two table-spoons milk. Dr. Niehaus Still Gassing 'Em Up

Dr. Richard J. Niehaus, of the Covington, Ky., Niehauses, dropped by for a visit.

Dr. Niehaus is the trainer of the Atlanta Crackers, owner of Faithful, a mongrel dog, originator of 1,000-mile shirts and an extremely interesting conversationalist, which he calls "gassing you up."

"Just dropped by for a little gas job," he announced. "and to tell you that Faithful has turned into a skin dog. He won't eat hamburger any longer—just skins. Shucks, he turned up his nose at a whole pound of hamburger I bought him the other day."

Dr. Niehaus also revealed his disturbance over a particular pitch which he developed back in his younger days.

"The ball sailed at the ground but just before reaching the plate, it would start to rise. You know," he said, "I threw that pitch just one time in a game and the last I saw of the ball, it was still rising as it went over the grandstand in back of the plate."

"I never threw it again but I've been trying to remember how I threw it so I could give it to Brownie and the other Cracker pitchers next season."

More of the Same Richard leaned back in the chair and tore the red cellophane tab from a pack of cigarettes and put it into his pocket.

"Saving 'em for a friend," he explained. "He heard that if you saved 10,000 of them, you could get one of those see-eye dogs. No, he's not blind but he knows a fellow who is and would like to give him one of those dogs."

"Say," he continued, "did I ever tell you about the time I outsmarted myself. Well, I was pitching for Atlanta, and Little Rock had a big left-handed first baseman—forget his name now—but he sure could hit that ball."

"It was nothing to nothing going into the last half of the ninth, two outs and this big fellow comes up. I had struck him out three times before on a side-arm curve ball."

"So I throws him that again and get two strikes on him. Then I figured I'd outsmart this big bum and throw a fast one by him. Only trouble was, I didn't get it by and the last I saw of it, it was sailing over the centerfield fence."

"And," he added solemnly, "the national pastime was over for the day."

Likes Football Dr. Niehaus is quite a football fan. "I went out to the Tech-Tennessee game last week," he said, "and I guess it did me more harm than if I had stayed at home. You know, I can't understand them football fans."

"Why those Tech boys were doing everything they could and all those big bums around me were cussin' them all over the place. Guess they must have had a buck or so bet on the game."

"Finally, I just had enough from one fellow and I told him to shut up. Almost socked him in the puss, too, only I thought better of it at the last moment. I probably would have busted my arm."

Richard was impressed with Cliff Depper, the new Cracker manager who visited Atlanta a couple of weeks ago.

"He can catch that apple," he remarked.

Techs Dread Rain The weatherman and his rain Tuesday night caused Georgia Tech football coaches many anxious moments and it wasn't until the sun broke through yesterday afternoon that any of them permitted a smile to cross his face.

The reason is simple. The Techs want no part of Alabama or anybody else on a wet field. They realize that the Crimson Tide, although beaten several times this season, is still capable of coming up with an upset and chances for this form reversal would greatly increase on soggy turf.

Alabama is capable of beating the Jackets with their best performance, on any sort of field.

The Crimson lost to Tulane by only a touchdown and tied a good Vanderbilt team. It also defeated Mississippi State, certainly not the weakest team in the Conference.

Tech isn't going into the game overconfident by any means. The Jackets are just keeping their fingers crossed and watching the weather.

Constitution Staff Photo—Hugh Stovall

THE MIDDLE BLACKSMITH—One of the biggest stumbling blocks in the path of the Brown High Rebels as they attempt to clinch their second straight City League crown tonight at Grady Stadium will be Leon Cunningham, 180-pound Smith High pivot man. The rugged Smithie has proven to be one of the hardest-hitting defensive line-backers in Georgia this year.

Tide's Cadenhead Rejoins Squad

FRANK ZIEGLER Breaks His Hand

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—(UP)—Three Alabama teams worked on defense against the Tide freshmen yesterday.

The squad turned in its best performance of recent weeks, stopping Georgia Tech plays consistently. Bill Cadenhead rejoined the roster at right halfback after being out since the Georgia game with a sprained ankle.

Tackle Dick Flowers is still considered lost for the Tech game and Guard Mike Mizerny and Halfback Charley Davis are doubtful.

Bama will hold her final drill here today, departing early Friday.

The Tide pulled one of last season's top upsets by beating the Jackets, 14 to 7, for the only defeat handed Coach Bobby Dodd's team.

Brown and Smith Tangle As Title Hangs in Balance

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Tonight is the night the gridiron legions of Brown and Smith High will write a thunderous chapter of Atlanta football history into the cleat-scarred turf at Grady Stadium as the West End juggernaut seeks to stash away its second consecutive City League championship.

As the two elevens set up their pattern for the opening kickoff as the clock tolls eight, Coach Cecil Moon's Smithies will have vengeance in their hearts and revenge in their minds. They'll be harking back to that dark and stormy night, that bitter cold and rain-swept night a year ago when the goosy mud of Grant Field dripped from their faces and these same Rebels sloshed over, through and around them for a 25-0 victory that had brought the grid Titans of Coach J. E. DeVaughn the coveted title in the first year the City League had been in existence.

The pressure of necessity will weigh heavily on the sturdy shoulders of the power-laden Blacksmiths, who must do or die in this one game or see the crown once more ride the jaunty brows of the residents of Peoples Street.

The Brownies, stripped of most of their former Tech High and Boys High stars after one season of riding high, have come back to near the heights again after groveling in the dust in early season before two teams that still are unbeaten, Marist and Lanier, and then fighting two out-of-State powerhouses, Charlotte (N. C.) Central and New Orleans Jesuit, to ties.

SPORTS

might of rejuvenated Brown. Grady fell, 25-6; O'Keefe went down, 26-0; Roosevelt crumbled, 27-0, and Murphy couldn't make it, 14-0.

The Smithies have an even more impressive record, having bowled over six foes, lost to one by a single point and tied another. The Hill Streeters, picked to take the whole hog before it all began, happened to get themselves loused up by two City Leaguers—Roosevelt, 14-13, and Bass, 13-13—however, and must cop this one and then sit back and squirm with hopes high that Bass can outdo Brown also.

The Smithies will lean heavily on a gargantuan and able forewall plus the left-footed punting and bull-like rushes of Conrad Moon, 200-pound, Vanderbilt-bound fullback who leads all State Class AA scorers with 63 points. He's scored at least one touchdown on seven of the team's eight foes.

In recent games the Smithies have produced a new threat in the 180-pound Glenn Mitchell, who specializes in running straight over folks after Moon has paved the highway with teeth-rattling blocks. Scatback Grady Waters occasionally takes a whirl at sweeping the ends. The Smithies don't throw the ball much, but when they do it's usually the right arm of Moon or Mitchell that heaves one into the arms of elongated W. A. Skelton.

The Brownies have one of the few up-front corps good enough to cope with the Smiths. Center Randolph Ragsdale and Tackle Ed Carithers have few peers. End Cecil Trainer is as agile and able as they come.

Quick opening plays, featuring the scattering of Charlie Brannon, Johnny Hunsinger, Wayne Clyburn and Gene Kinard; end Dick aeriels from the hand of Pepper Rodgers feature the dangerous Brown attack.

The chips are piled high on the table, and it's showdown time. Some 10,000 people plan to be there watching it.

Tech's Frank Ziegler Breaks Hand

By GEORGE TISINGER

Georgia Tech, preparing for Saturday's clash with Alabama at Grant Field, suffered a big blow yesterday when Frank Ziegler, one of the finest fullbacks in the Southeastern Conference, broke his right hand in a scrimmage session.

Ziegler, a fine line plunger and punter, is definitely out of the Alabama game and may be lost for the final two tilts against The Citadel and Georgia. Although everyone at the Flats is hoping the College Park junior will be back in action for the big battle with Georgia they aren't very optimistic. Center Gene Frizzell has been on the sidelines for six weeks with a similar injury.

Needless to say, Ziegler's loss is a severe blow to the Jacket offensive machine. His ability to pick up a few yards when they were needed most has had much to do with the Techs' success thus far.

Adding to the woes of Bobby Dodd and his staff was yesterday's ragged scrimmage and the fact that Halfback Bob McCoy, hurt in the Duke game, may not be able to go full team against the Tide. McCoy didn't see service against Tennessee last week, and with Ziegler now out, the Jackets will have to do some quick revamping in their offensive attack.

Fullback Frank's injury came in the midst of a so-so practice during which the Jackets didn't conduct themselves too well against Alabama defensive formations.

They spent the first part of the afternoon trying out their aerial defenses and then went into an extended session covering their own aerial offenses with grown up blocks and tackles being thrown as they attempted to protect their passers.

It must be reported that red shirts were breaking through quite often and hauling down the T formation quarterbacks before they had a chance to get the balls away.

All of which was pointed out quite thoroughly by Coach Bobby Dodd in his discussion with railbirds after practice.

Dodd was in a leveling mood, and what he said made sense. "It is foolish for anyone to think that we are going out and beat Alabama by any 30 or 40 points just because we are a relaxed team after our loss to Tennessee," he said. "It could be, but we don't think so and there is no use fooling the fans into thinking Alabama is that weak a team."

The coach said that he and assistants were hoping for a dry field, of course, and that his little backs and middle-sized linemen couldn't be expected to do the impossible. He said that there was a distinct possibility that Alabama could come to Atlanta Saturday and have a good day and walk off with the ball game.

"Nobody has made any one-sided odds against Alabama all this season," the Tech coach said. In the season's opener Tulane defeated the Crimson by a touchdown and then Alabama tied a good Vanderbilt team which right now is one of the better things in the Southeastern.

The Tide defeated Mississippi State by a close score and then gave Tennessee all they were looking for for better than two quarters.

Georgia made the Tide look bad in their 35 to 0 win but Tech coaches insist and movies prove it, that at least three Bulldog touchdowns were more or less of the freak variety.

Spirited Bulldogs In Short Drill

ATHENS—The league-leading Georgia Bulldogs had the shortest Wednesday practice of the year yesterday afternoon when they raced through a signal drill in sweat clothes instead of the usual midweek scrimmage.

Showers were steaming more than an hour ahead of schedule and the gridders showed their joy with enthusiastic yells of "Get a Tiger in Columbus Saturday."

They had just concluded one of their best workouts in some time. They worked mostly on the passing attack, despite the strong winds that whipped across the Ag Hill practice field. John Rauch, as usual, was doing most of the throwing and pitching strikes to all corners and the receivers were responding equally as well, sometimes turning in what seemed to be almost impossible catches.

In the coaches' dressing room, Wally Butts and his assistants sat around commenting on the spirit of the club. One of the assistant mentors said, "The boys were in good spirits, weren't they?" Coach Butts replied, "Yeah, and they should be raising the roof in the showers. That's the shortest Wednesday session we've had this year, but the month of November is not much of a time to try to teach a football player anything. He should have learned it by now."

Coach Butts will tell all comers that a great deal of what the Bulldogs have done this fall is due to good spirit. "A football team with out spirit hasn't a prayer," he said. "Our boys have been a lot more eager this year than they were at times last season."

The Bulldogs will conclude home workouts this afternoon. They depart by bus tomorrow morning for Columbus and the 52nd meeting with the Auburn Plainsmen, the oldest Georgia rival.

SHORT SIGNALS—Eli Marich failed to intercept a pass in the Florida game which was the second tilt this fall that he has failed to snag an enemy aerial. Herbie Norris, Assistant Varsity Manager, brings comments from all sideliners with his long kicks. He boots the pigskin to the ball bag instead of carrying them in his arms. Two jersey numbers have been retired at Georgia in the past seven years. Frank Slinkwich's No. 21 and Charlie Tripp's 62 have earned their places in the trophy room. Georgia's motto for Saturday is "Remember 1942."

Auburn Loses Pelfrey, Wallis

AUBURN, Ala.—(UP)—The Auburn coaches got discouraging news yesterday as Halfbacks Ray Pelfrey and John Wallis were pronounced out of the Georgia game with injuries.

Five other players—Halfback Jocko Norton, Fullback Danny Stewart, Quarterback Charlie Langer and Guards Danny Mantrone and Ray Moore—were in the doubtful class because of scrimmage wounds. Yesterday's rough work was the last of the week.

Vandy Called Best of Mediocre Crop Of Dixie Football Teams This Season

By GRANTLAND RICE
North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK—There is little question now about the top ranking of Michigan, Notre Dame and Army. After this trio you can place California, Georgia, Georgia Tech, SMU, Oklahoma, Northwestern and Oregon.

Two able scouts rate Vanderbilt today the best team south of the Mason and Dixon Line, barring none. The Tennessee game in a few weeks will prove Vanderbilt's place.

The fact is that the South, the Southwest and the Midwest have failed to be outstanding. They are not up to early notices. Their press agents, it seems, were too enthusiastic. It took Doak Walker—a one-man football team—to save SMU.

The Southwest is none too strong. The top teams in the Southern Conference and the Southeastern Conference are none too strong. They are not in the same circle with Army, Notre Dame and Michigan.

The Far West is just average. Stanford, improving, was rated close to California by Far Western writers who came East with the team last week. Yet Army could have beaten Stanford, 75 to 0. Army subs finished the fourth period.

North Carolina, Georgia Tech and Georgia have been good, but not outstanding. One veteran Southern observer believes that Vanderbilt is a much better outfit today than any of the three mentioned. Tennessee was as good as North Carolina and better than Georgia Tech. Also, there is a general feeling that Georgia will beat Tech.

Oddly enough, Oklahoma opened its season by losing to Santa Clara, 20 to 17. The Sooners have lost nothing since. Bob Higgins, of Penn State, believes his Nittany Lions could take any team from the South or the Southwest and is more than willing to prove it. Bob, however, has nothing to say about Michigan, Army or Notre Dame.

Unless another violent wrench occurs, Army will beat Pennsylvania on Saturday, and stand as the best team in the East. Red Blaik shudders when you even mention this. Penn State will run second in Eastern rankings.

Army or Penn State would be more than a match, or an even match, for any team in the Big Nine, South or Southwest, barring possibly Notre Dame and Michigan.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Report That Oklahoma Aggies Are 'In' Is Denied by Delta Bowl Officials

Condensed From AP, UP, INS Wire Reports.

The Bowl rumors continue to fly. In Stillwater, Okla., yesterday, Athletic Director Hank Iba said that Oklahoma A&M has had two feelers for postseason games in minor bowls, but that no action will be taken until after Nov. 20.

At the same time, Sports Editor Jack Charvat, in the Tulsa Tribune, said that the Aggies, who've won five and lost two thus far, would be host team in the Memphis Delta Bowl. But Delta Bowl officials quickly spiked that report, and said that the Aggies were under consideration, but that no invitation had been extended.

Arkansas and Ole Miss have also been approached, with Ole Miss' case depending, of course, on whether or not the Southeastern Conference rescinds its "three bowl limit" rule.

SHORT SHOTS—Florida will open its 1949 grid card against The Citadel, Athletic Director Bear Wolf said yesterday. Other Georgia opponents are Tulsa, Auburn, Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech, Furman, Georgia, Kentucky, Miami and Alabama. . . . Fred Haney, once skipper of the St. Louis Browns, has been named manager of the Hollywood Stars (Pacific Coast League), succeeding veteran Jimmy Dykes who resigned late last season. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Harmon became the parents of their second daughter yesterday at

Prep Predictions

Charlie Roberts enjoyed that "every-other-week-good-week" in picking the high school football winners last week, hitting on 10 of 12 selections for an 83.3 percentage. He also hit the Smith-Richmond Academy and Lanier-Benedictine boys on the now 20-0 margin of victory and was only one touchdown off on four others. He now has called 25 games in 100 selections by the correct margin of triumph by touchdowns.

His total for the year is 77 wins and 25 losses for a 75.5 percentage. Here are his nominations for this week.

THURSDAY'S GAMES
Brown over Smith by one touchdown. (That's the way the folks who gamble pick it. We think so, too, even though City League coaches heavily favor Smith. We rate the lines even, and Brown's attack better because of those fifty quick opening plays and superior passing.)

Jackson, of Jacksonville, over Grady by three touchdowns. (Neither team has a good record but the Floridians have done well against some of the best in the Gator State. They're on home soil, too.)

FRIDAY'S GAMES
Roosevelt over Murphy by one touchdown. (Tossup stuff. The Crimson can ramble for plenty but the Eagles continue to make it tough on the best of them. Tackle Frank Webster, a good 'un, will be available this outing, too.)

Marist over Roosevelt by five touchdowns. (Shorty Doyle says such predictions make it awfully tough, but he keeps beating them by more than we predict. A win here means an unbeaten season, giving the Cadets added incentive.)

Bass over St. Petersburg by 2 touchdowns. (The Floridians don't appear too strong this year. The Blue Wave may find it rough though with Marshall Akers and Jim Robertson.)

West Fulton over Cadetown by one touchdown. (The invaders have dropped decisions only to Lagrange and rate an edge, but those Owls have a way of knocking the best off when they are right. We see an upset here.)

North Fulton over O'Keefe by one touchdown. (Little to choose in this one. We like Gordon's battery running and North Fulton's scoring ability better, but they'll have to stop that Warren Harper to Opal Moon passing or they are sunk.)

McCallie over GMA by two touchdowns. (GMA and Fulton were the teams to upset us last week, but those Mid-South folks from Chattanooga always have our number down this way. The Cadets could pull another upset though.)

Decatur over Remy by two touchdowns. (Charlie Walker's team had a week of rest and should be in a scoring mood. They can go, but had better beware the aroused Hilltoppers. They are rugged when right.)

Fulton over Spaulding by one touchdown. (Claude Willis boys have outdone themselves all year. They may drop this one in Griffin but we won't believe it until we see it in print.)

Marion over Carvelton by three touchdowns. (This could be a corner of a game, but the Blue Devils are high-spirited Devils who they put their minds to it. Carvelton is top-flight though.)

Thomasville over Moultrie by three touchdowns. (The good ones in South Georgia take turns at smashing Moultrie. This could be the time for the worm to turn but it doesn't figure that way on the surface.)

YMCA Cage League Will Start Nov. 16

The Metropolitan Basketball League Committee announced that the YMCA Basketball League will open Nov. 16. Team entries must be at the YMCA by Nov. 9. The entry fee will be $30 which will include all league fees, including the play-offs for the upper and lower divisions at the end of the league. The league will consist of one round and will take approximately three and one-half months.

The following teams are entered: Junior Chamber of Commerce, Rex DeMay, Rich's Department Store, Greek American League, Tractor and Machinery, Sons of Pericles, Cascade Methodist Church, 201st Ordinance, Capital Avenue Baptist Church, Texas Company and Ahepa.

GRID GLANCES

Thanksgiving Day Belongs to the Frosh

By GEORGE TISINGER

All the way through the Fall up to Thanksgiving Day they are going through a sort of transition period.

These men had been high school stars and open to all the adulation and praise that their weekend efforts won them. Many had been courted by dozens of universities and colleges.

They made their choices. And the next Autumn they found out that a college freshman footballer's life is devoted to his varsity.

Each week, they and the B teamers learned a different set of plays. They were the punching bags for the varsity as they practiced against them, showing their older brothers what the varsity team's next week's opponent could do both offensively and defensively.

True, they had two or three games of their own to play, but half the time they didn't have but a very short time to try out their own plans.

Often they went into their games confused and had to depend mainly on native ability to see them through.

But one day in the year they come into their own—in our section of the country at least.

That is Thanksgiving Day when Tech and Georgia freshmen play their annual charity game. The Grant Field for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

It's a day when future Georgia and Tech stars are born. It's a day when the fans for the first time get a preview of things to come on Southern grids. And scarcely a year passes when a name does not flare into the headlines that year which will stay there for many years to come.

Remember the days when for the first time you saw and heard about Charlie Trippi, Hank Sinkwich, "Dutch" Knepper, Bill Healy or any number of the others?

The charity series between the two frosh elevens began back in 1933. It now stands at eight victories for the Bulldogs and five for the Baby Jackets.

Soon after its beginning, the name of the game and its descriptive slogan: "Strong Legs Will Run That Weak May Walk," became known not only nationally but internationally as well.

The people come by the thousands and gladly pay their money to see one of the finest football exhibitions possible on any gridiron and go away with the satisfaction of knowing that the few dollars they turn in at the ticket window will go for one of the most worthy causes in the world—helping a crippled child find his way through life!

Every cent taken in that day goes to the crippled children's hospital.

Every person inside the stadium that day pays his own way. No one is excepted—officials, stadium workers or newsmen.

They all do their part—gladly. That's why it is something more than just an athletic contest. It is something that gets inside you and makes you feel a better man or woman for just having been there and contributed in your own small way to the work those people are doing at the hospital.

The tickets are inexpensive. Seats in the West and East Stands are sold at $1.80 each. Those in the South Stands are sold for $1.20. They'll be on sale at Muse's, the Georgia Tech Athletic Association offices, Michael's in Athens, and other spots to be announced later.

Try some this year, if you haven't before.

Cagers To Play Benefit Games

A "Mona Harris benefit" triple-header basketball program will be held at Sports Arena Sunday afternoon, it was announced yesterday. The Denver, Col., girl, who originally came here to play with the Sports Arena Blues, is this season after proving herself one of the best softball players in the country, recently underwent an operation and has been seriously ill. She will not be able to play basketball at all this season.

The Technological College and the Georgia Sporting Goods boys will clash in the opener at 2 p. m., with the Sports Arena girls and Lorelei Ladies meeting in the 3 p. m. contest.

Johnny Moon's Sports Arena Rebels will engage Peerless Mills, in the feature at 4 o'clock.

Even the players themselves will buy tickets to the games, it was announced.

Boston Braves Draft Charlie Gilbert; Radcliffe, Other Bonus Stars Ignored

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Those talent-tagged kids known as bonus players were ignored yesterday as the major baseball leagues staged their annual draft.

A 20-MINUTE HAUL—Mrs. Leon F. Paris holds two large-mouth and two small-mouth bass which her husband landed within a space of 20 minutes while fishing in Cloud's Creek, just over the Georgia State line in South Carolina recently. Using an "Al Foss bucktail" lure, Paris fished for one-hour but these four bass and two others he missed struck in a fast, and furious, 20 minutes. The four fish weighed eight pounds, the largest being three pounds and 19½ inches long.

Tech Still Top Team In Nation, Defensively

NEW YORK—(AP)—If the figures can be trusted, the tightest defensive struggle scheduled on any gridiron this weekend is that between North Carolina and Maryland at Griffith Stadium in Washington.

About the only conclusion to be drawn from statistics released today by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau is that the meeting of the two rock-ribbed Southern rivals will produce a scoreless tie, barring a field goal.

North Carolina is second only to Georgia Tech both in total defense and rushing defense among all the major teams, and its punting average is the best. Maryland tops them all in defense against enemy passes and stands fourth in total defense.

Additionally, Maryland shares with Clemson the distinction of having held opponents to the fewest points scored—33 in seven games.

Despite its upset by Tennessee last Saturday, Georgia Tech leads for the fourth straight week in total defense, having allowed seven rivals an average of 130.3 yards. North Carolina has permitted 141.3, Army 161.1 and Maryland 163.3. From there the figures soar rapidly.

Opposing ball-carriers have averaged only 47.1 yards against Tech. North Carolina has yielded 55.9 yards per game overland, Pennsylvania, 64.2, and Minnesota, yielded 78.

The week's overall statistical picture—ranging in both offensive and defensive talents—gives Army's Cadets the highest National rating. Coach Earl Blaik's Terrors lead in rushing offense, are second in total offense and third in total defense.

Following are the defensive figures:

TOTAL DEFENSE—(Average yards yielded per game to opponents' passing and rushing): Georgia Tech, 130.3; North Carolina, 141.3; Army, 161.1; Maryland, 163.3; Brown, 175; North Carolina State, 177.4; Minnesota, 181.1; Northwestern, 181.6; Kansas, 185.1; Davidson, 187.6.

RUSHING DEFENSE—Georgia Tech, 47.1 yards per game; North Carolina, 55.9; Pennsylvania, 64.2; Minnesota, 78; Michigan, 80.4; Army, 85.3; Vanderbilt, 85.9; West Virginia, 88.8; William and Mary, 89.3; California, 91.

PASSING DEFENSE—Maryland, 49.3 yards per game; Brown, 50.7; Richmond, 51.1; Northwestern, 51.6; Utah, 53.1; Montana State, 54.6; Brigham Young, 57.1; Hardin-Simmons, 57.6; Villanova, 62.8; Texas Christian, 63.1.

Kirby, Berg Lose Exhibition Match

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (AP)—Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, and Patty Berg, Minneapolis, lost to Herschel Spears and Ben McWane, Birmingham, in an exhibition golf match yesterday. The score was 7 and 6.

Spears, assistant pro at the Birmingham Country Club, where the match was played, fired an eight-under-par 68 for the 18.

Miss Kirby, an amateur, and Miss Berg, a pro, had medal rounds of about 74. Miss McWane shot an approximate 78.

Georgia Tech, Auburn Frosh Clash Today

AUBURN—Two of the strongest freshman football teams in the Southeastern Conference will tangle here today when the high-powered Georgia Tech Baby Yellow Jackets meet the Auburn Baby Tigers in the Auburn stadium.

The Armistice Day battle between the frosh elevens of the two schools is expected to attract a near capacity crowd to see this classic starting at 2 p. m.

The Baby Tigers have been drilling hard during the past three weeks for Thursday's game with the Yellow Jackets and they are determined to add the Georgia eleven to their list of victims.

The probable starting lineup for Auburn will be Charlie Justo and Eugene Mulhall at ends, Jim Kite and Frank Pool or John Clouch at tackles, Ed Bauer or Jim Brooks and Fred McClintock at guards, and T. R. Wade at center. In the backfield either Elmer Jahn or John Crolla will be at quarterback, Dwight Hitt at left half, Joe Jeffers, Bobby Briggs or Homer Williams at right halfback, and Bill Tucker at fullback.

For Georgia Tech the starting eleven will probably be composed of John Weigle and Pete Ferris at ends, John Bryan and Marion Adams or Chester Paul at tackles, Ray Beck and Earl Allen or Don Myers at guards, Billy Hartness, Neil Greer or John Weathers at center, Darrell Crawford, quarterback; Jackie Rudolph and Howell Sheffer at halfbacks, and Roy Thompson at fullback.

TECH OVER ALA.

(By Pitts Smith)

Despite a couple of three upheavals among major Southern and Western Doms, the intermediate and minor teams, wholesale producers of Sunday morning headaches, proved to be bosom pals this week and we wound up batting 85 percent with 80 correct predictions, 14 embarrassments and 6 dead heats.

TOP GAMES THIS WEEK—Ole Miss, stalling a fast-moving Tennessee, Tulane hobbling Baylor's Bears and Clemson over Wake Forest with no holds barred. Notre Dame clipping Northwestern's Wildcats, Illinois over Ohio State and Minnesota leveling Iowa. Army loping past Penn. U., Princeton grabbing Big Three honors by walloping Yale, and Dartmouth's Indians tomahawking Cornell. California roaring by Wash. State, Oregon over UCLA and Santa Clara taking the "Big Little" game from St. Mary's.

WEEKLY ROUNDUP—Wonder what Bud Wilkinson fed those fancy-stepping Oklahoma Sooners during half-time? Bear Wolfe almost pulling one out of the trunk with his rejuvenated Florida Gators. About time Henry Frka's Tulane Green Wave stopped spluttering around. Peaback Walker's Wake Forest Deacons doubling aspirin sales in the Carolinas. Reckon as how Chas. Caldwell must be using a blow torch on those Princeton Tigers.

THE STYLE CENTER OF THE SOUTH

Ex-Center, Now End, Is Lineman of Week

By ROBERT MOORE

WILLIAMSBURG, Va.—(AP)—Lou Hoitsma raised up from his end position and just sort of grinned. Mist seemed to filter from his eyes and the six-foot-two-inch William and Mary flanker who once played center was every inch a pleased football player.

Hoitsma had just been told he'd been selected as the lineman of the week in the Associated Press poll. That honor was his for a brilliant performance in William and Mary's surprising 7-7 tie last Saturday with North Carolina.

"Gosh," he mumbled, "this is the biggest surprise of my life. I don't know what to say."

Then, he hesitated, finally added: "Don't say too much about me. Say something about the rest of the players. They were the fellows who really made possible the tie with the Tarheels."

Asked about his circus catch of a 21-yard touchdown pass from Tailback Tommy Koczowski, Hoitsma said he "didn't know what was going on from the time the play started until they were putting the score on the scoreboard."

"They told me in the huddle to get down into the end zone," Hoitsma said, "and get that ball. And I just had to get that ball."

"Say, I wish you'd say something about Tommy Thompson, our center. That Tommy's an All-America center in my opinion in every game we play. He's the best there is. Wasn't he terrific?"

William and Mary Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray described the Patterson, N. J., senior as a "quiet, well-mannered sort of fellow everybody likes."

When Hoitsma returned from military service in 1946, McCray decided he'd make a good end.

"It takes a lot of nerve to make an end out of a star center," the Rube explained. "Lou hesitated when I told him, but after he'd been playing end four or five days, he was crazy about it. He was at home at end overnight."

Tulsa To Dedicate Field to Frnk's Son

TULSA, Okla.—(AP)—Tulane University Football Coach Henry Frnk and Mrs. Frnk have been invited here Nov. 30 for the dedication of a high school athletic field to their late son, Henry Frnk, Jr.

Young Frnk, a star fullback on the Will Rogers High School football team, was injured fatally during a 1941 season game.

A bronze and granite marker in the youth's memory will be placed at a corner of the Rogers Field, now being completed.

CHANNING COPE'S ALMANAC:

Farm Women's Work Same Over the World

THURSDAY, NOV. 11, 1948

Suggestion of the day: So this is Armistice Day. Pretty well descriptive of the situation we are now in. Don't you reckon if we shared more with the hungry folks of the world, we'd get along better? Maybe we could put off the war for several years. I don't know, but it's worth thinking about.

There's a feeling abroad in the land that it's time to step out and forget our fears and set about getting the things we ought to have for the country people of the nation. Things such as education, housing, medical care, better food, pretty things, music, pictures, leisure, absence of frustration, and a general easing up of the strain on the human being.

You get the feel of this at the Farm Bureau meeting at Macon where the farmers turn out but more importantly, the women turn out too.

Women don't care much whether a remedy is conservative, liberal, socialistic or what not; if it will lift some of the burden from their backs, give their children a better opportunity, lighten the old man's load a mite, they are for it. And there isn't any use deploring it, the fat is in the fire or the situation is on the mend, whichever way you look at it.

The farm women of the world are uniting. The President of the Associated Rural Women of the World told the Farm Bureau Convention there was little difference between the women of the different nations. The language, and the Iron Curtain, those are the only differences. Some day the women will refuse to let their sons go to war, and . . . war will end.

Farm women do the same sort of work all over the world, much more so than laborers in any other field. They read the kinship in each other's actions, their hands, their gestures, their eyes. Turn any farm woman loose on any other farm and she will fill the vacancy without a bobble. And these women are getting together.

In many ways it may be the saving of the world. Understanding, absence from hunger, and a mother's self-effacing interest may well be the prescription for continued peace.

These farm women make no bones about it, they are for their children and their homes and their husbands' well-being. Whatever it takes, if they can get it, they will have it.

The people who split hairs over political shades of meaning ought to listen to these folks for a while. It would open their eyes. The farm women are on the march!

Redfern Trucks Load at New Plant

2 Moultrie Brothers Make Redfern Sausage Success

Two brothers from Moultrie came to Atlanta 18 months ago with a recipe for country sausage and built a business that keeps five trucks busy supplying customers.

The brothers, Robert Redfern, 29, and Lester, 30, and yesterday their idea was that people of a large metropolitan area would welcome an opportunity to buy at their corner market a product that has been a rural commodity heretofore—a real down-on-the-farm country sausage.

That they were right is proved by the growth of their business. They set up their first "shop" in an abandoned night club on the Buford Highway.

Today they have their own modern processing plant at 1016 Howell Mill Road and a hustling business all over Greater Atlanta.

All during this brief period of spectacular growth, the brothers have concentrated on keeping their product a "real country sausage," sometimes having to produce less in order to keep the quality up to par.

But it has paid off. After all, says Pres. Robert Redfern, most of these city folks came from the country. And the city-bred folks have always envied the country folks their home-fixed foods.

Block Hearing. Otis Firm Asks

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Otis and Company, Cleveland investment house, yesterday asked Federal Court to halt the Securities and Exchange Commission proceedings against it in connection with the collapse of a $10,000,000 offering of Kaiser-Frazer stock.

The Commission has set hearings to begin next Monday on the question whether it should suspend or revoke the Cleveland firm's broker-dealer registration because of its conduct in the K-F case.

Otis and Company was announced as principal underwriter of the $10,000,000 offering last February. The investment house later withdrew from the underwriting after a period of on-again, off-again negotiations with the motor car manufacturer firm.

In asking the court, Otis attorneys asserted: "Unless restrained and enjoined by this Court, the Commission will cause great and irreparable damage to the plaintiff not only in the enormous expense of defending the proceedings but also in the damage to its reputation and credit and interference with its business operations."

Vet House Needs Peak Said Past

NEW YORK—(AP)—The most urgent period of veterans' housing need has passed, the United States Savings and Loan League's convention was told yesterday.

T. B. King, Director of the Veterans Administration's loan guaranty service, said that while the shelter and housing problems of the veteran are not yet solved, "undoubtedly the frantic stage of unparalleled mass demand has softened."

At the same time he reminded the League members that about 13,000,000 veterans have not yet used their loan guarantees and that they have nine more years in which to do so.

Lending institutions can help bring housing costs and prices down within reach of the broad veterans' market, King said, by channeling mortgage funds to builders who are doing the best job in building low and medium-priced housing of good quality.

Floridan To Manage Aidmore

Lee O. Dry, former manager of hospitals at Belle Glade and Pahokee, Fla., has been appointed Business Manager of Aidmore, convalescent hospital for crippled children here.

Robert Pruitt, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors, Crippled Children League of Georgia, who announced the appointment, said it was subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

Dry, a native of Dodge City, Kan., replaces Mrs. Bess Rausch, Superintendent, who recently resigned. Linwood Beck, Education Director of the Crippled Children League of Georgia, also has sent Pruitt his resignation.

Dry served 11½ years in the Medical Department of the U. S. Army. He is a major in the Medical Corps Reserve of the Army.

Dr. Harriet Gillette, Medical Director of Aidmore and the Crippled Children League, said an effort was being made by Aidmore officials "to approach the standards for children's hospitals laid down by the U. S. Children's Bureau."

Funds Asked For Park Improvements

City Parks Department requests for $100,000 to modernize the Grant Park swimming pool and another $110,000 to improve the Grant Park Zoo hang in the balance today.

The Police Blotter

SUDDEN URGE—The urge for a new car apparently was too much for one individual, according to a report filed by the Desmet Cam Co., 275 Peachtree St., N. E. An intruder broke into the building and took a 1949 model which had not been serviced for delivery. The auto was valued at $2,439.

EMPLOYEE MISSING—The Spivey Produce Company at the State Market has appealed to the police for aid in locating a missing employee. William E. Spivey told Det. J. L. Moseley and Y. H. Allen the employee disappeared Monday after going to the bank to make a deposit. He said the deposit was $200 short and the company had discovered a shortage of $1,800 in its records.

BURGLARY—Cigarettes still seem to be the number one item on burglary lists. Smashing through a side window of the Reck Grill at 226½ Peachtree St., N. W., two men carried off 80 cartons of cigarettes and took nothing else. Police explained burglars prefer tobacco because they are easily disposed of.

POOR MECHANIC—Frank I. Barbera, of 801 Washington St., S. W., told police he was thankful the man who broke into his automobile either was a poor mechanic or was frightened away. Barbera said the bolts holding the radio had been removed, but the thief evidently was not able to get the set out of the car.

Simons cut his demands for zoo improvements from a former request for $500,000 to $110,000 in his 1949 budgetary requests. Simons said he had scaled down requests in the hope of getting something as a starter.

Included in the listings are $100,000 for building improvements and another $10,000 for additional animals.

Among other requests in the Simons new budget are pavilions for Washington and Pershing Parks, comfort stations for Pershing and Couch Parks, a greenhouse and conservatory for Grant Park, and improvement of the cyclorama painting of the Battle of Atlanta and Grant Park.

North Avenue Non-Parking Is Pondered
City Council's Police Committee last night recommended that both sides of North Avenue between West Peachtree Street and Hemphill Avenue be made non-parking at all hours to expedite the flow of traffic.

Capl. Marvin Thomas, head of the Traffic Bureau, recommended the action, asserting it would provide a four-lane stretch and would relieve an almost intolerable traffic congestion. The recommendation goes to City Council Monday for action by that body.
